Investors asked to back pottery

Local investors have been asked to help fund a proposed $2.5 million pottery factory that could employ as many as 70 people within five years. The plant is to be built adjacent to the Haliburton Highlands Museum on land donated by the municipality, which will take preferred shares in the new venture equal to the value of the land and servicing improvements.

Details of the proposed venture were unveiled Thursday night at a public meeting called by the municipality. Reeve Murray Fearrey said discussion began in February when council was approached by Ernie Dockerty and Mark Spence, principal owners of Edgewood Pottery, a Toronto-based company that manufactures ceramic products and markets them in Canada and the United States. The company was seeking to expand into the export market, and needed

Park site.

Edgewood Properties was established in 1970, and purchased by Spence and Dockerty in 1984. Since then the company has experienced a 400 percent increase in sales, Spence said.

The company produces three categories of products, examples of which were on display at last Thursday's meeting. Decorative and furniture accessories are sold to a wholesaler who markets them to retailers through trade shows and direct customer calls. In the past two years Edgewood's sales in this area have grown by 50 percent a year, according to Spence. Horticultural overpots are sold directly to retailers, with sales increasing by 15 percent in each of the past two years. Premium and incentive ceramics are sold to consumer goods manufacturers or service-oriented groups which give the product away or resell it to their customers to enhance product sales. The growth rate in this product area has been approximately 50 percent a year, Spence said.

In January, 1985 the company entered the American market for furniture accessories, which Spence described as huge, totalling about $300 million. Projected sales for the proposed Haliburton plant would reach $5 million in year five, a figure which Edgewood believes is "very realistic."

The proposed Haliburton plant would cover 34,000 square feet, including a 6000 square foot retail outlet. Machinery would be 'state of the art' for the production of high quality, relatively high cost ceramic products. Organized plant tours would be emphasized both as a tourist attraction and as a means of marketing products directly to consumers. Some retail space also would be provided for Ontario artisans' ceramics and pottery.

It is amazing to realize that fewer than 100 people raised at least $10,000 to help build wells in India, especially when you consider that many of those walkers were children.

Walk for Water has become an annual event the people of Haliburton County have taken into their hearts since it began three years ago under the auspices of Help A Village Effort, a charitable organization set up to fund the drilling of fresh-water wells in India.

This year, a record amount of money was raised by the 96 walkers who turned up at the Rotary Park early Saturday morning with their pledge sheets full of names of sponsors willing to support them.

The youngest "walker" was Abby Blythe Hagerman, though since she is only eight months old her level of participation was mainly looking at everyone else as she was carried by her mother, more production space. It had tried unsuccessfully to purchase the now bankrupt Blue Mountain Pottery, and subsequently selected Haliburton as the preferred location for a new plant.

"The municipality has been impressed by the initiative these people have shown," Fearrey said, noting that council has entered into discussions on funding assistance with federal and provincial officials.

Fearrey said the plant would employ 40 people initially and increase its staff over five years as demand for its products increases. In addition to providing year round jobs, the plant would be a tourist attraction, offering tours and selling some of its products through a retail outlet at the Glebe

Americans find area 'fantastic'

Saturday's familiarization tour was a great success for all

If the enthusiastic mood among the various American tourist operators who were in Haliburton on Saturday is anyting to go by, the Highlands can expect a few more tourists from northern New York state.

"I've been very much impressed; it's just been fantastic," said travel club owner Genevieve Burakowska. She had never been north of Toronto before, and said nothing you could read in brochures could help form an opinion of Haliburton Highlands as much as this recent visit has.

During the day, they toured the area, stopping in at various lodges and resorts for either a meal, coffee or dessert. At each stop, she said the owners and staff "added that extra willingness behind their warm, cordial welcome." There is not one place she had a negative impression about, and if there was, she would definitely say so, she said.

In the future when she is booking or planning tours, she will definitely be bringing people north to the Highlands, she added.

Christi Swanson of the Auto Club of Western New York said she has been pleasantly surprised by what she has seen on this tour because "I really didn't have any idea what it would be like."

"The area is very beautiful," she said, "and the hospitality was more than what you would expect."

Her friend Sally Boutwell believes some of her clients would be very interested in coming up to Haliburton since "You want to get away yet you don't want to driver very far."

As for her impression of the tour, she said, "It's been wonderful. Everybody's just made us feel really special and welcome."

"I'm so glad I'm on this tour," said Betty Isada of Buffalo. "It's been wonderful. When people asked us about Canada before, our knowledge would stop in Toronto."

It was Chamber of Commerce manager Shirley Rapson who made the whole tour come alive, said Lulu Zinck, who operates just east of Niagara Falls. She has thoroughly enjoyed the trip and said "All of this is brand new to me and I'm very intrigued." She was especially impressed with the pride the lodge and resort owners demonstrated when giving them a tour of their facilities.

"The beautiful thing about it was everybody found what they were looking for -- everybody went away happy," said Rapson after the tour. During the day she spent with the various operators, she was very much impressed by their enthusiasm and delight they found in what they were being shown.

"They feel they've stumbled onto something just exquisite," she says, adding that while they were shown much of the area, they were not so inundated with new sights that they will forget what they saw. "They said, and they are seasoned travellers, that they have never had a familiarization tour with such graciousness shown by everybody."

The tour of the Haliburton Highlands leg of their trip started with a look around the Chamber's new offices on Highway 35, taking with them handfulls of pamphlets even though Rapson has arranged a folder of the various accommodations and sights. (Local operators were also given the mailing addresses of the tour members.) Then they had a coffee break at Hart Lodge, lunch at Sir Sam's, dessert at the Domain of Killien, a few rides down the Sky Slider, and a social hour at Wig-a-Mog Inn.

Museum's expansion applauded at opening

It was hoped that a horseshoe could be nailed over the doors of the three new buildings at the Haliburton Highlands Museum, but organizers settled for the traditional ribbon cuttings by John Eakins, Minister of Tourism, Warden Harry Davis and Dysart reeve Murray Fearrey.

The mood was cheerful and optimistic to match the change in weather on Saturday afternoon when more than 70 people joined the local dignitaries in celebrating the expansion of the county museum.

"This is all part of our heritage, our culture and our education," said Warden Davis, adding that he is looking forward to seeing school children tour the buildings to gain a greater appreciation of what life was like a few generations ago. "This is a fine addition to the county."

"What you are doing is preserving a great deal of the history of this county," said Victoria-Haliburton MPP John Eakins in his opening remarks. He said it was a real pleasure to attend the ribbon cutting since he has watched "with some interest" the development of the museum over the past few years.

As well as providing an entertaining way to learn more about our past, Eakins said the new additions bring us even one step further in attracting tourists to our area.

Another person who has watched the museum grow and change is Alan Barnes who was present on behalf of Lily Munro, the Minister of Citizenship and Culture.

"Believe me, what you have here now is a far cry from what I saw a few years ago...well done," he said. "The museum will help us connect the present to our past and dignitaries joined the chairman of the board, Ross Carver, in officially opening three "new" buildings.

Police News

General Occurrences

During the period of May 26 to June 1, personnel at Minden Detachment investigated the following occurrences: 17 motor vehicle accidents which resulted in five minor injuries; and 60 general occurrences, including 13 thefts.

Accidents

On Wednesday, May 28 at 6:35 p.m. on Hwy. 121 at Cedar Ave. in Haliburton, Jo-Ann Pearson of Haliburton was operating a motorcycle southbound on Hwy. 121. A northbound vehicle operated by Wendell Wood, also of Haliburton, was making a left hand turn onto Cedar Ave. and turned in front of Pearson. The motorcycle hit the vehicle and driver Pearson received minor injuries. Wood has been charged with failing to afford reasonable opportunity to avoid a collision.

On Saturday, May 31, at 6:00 p.m. on Hwy. 35 just south of the Wren Lake bridge in Sherborne Township, Robert Frohlich of RR2 Whitby rolled his 1980 Honda motorcycle. Frohlich failed to make a curve to the left and dropped off the pavement, hit the ditch and bounced three times. Frohlich and a passenger, Kevin Boneham, received minor injuries. Frohlich has been charged with driving under suspension.

Fall From Fire Tower

On May 28 at 8:00 p.m. William Rogers of Mississauga, a summer student employed with the MNR, climbed the fire tower at Leslie Frost Centre in Sherborne Twp. Rogers was at the 50 to 60 foot level when he fell. Rogers was taken to Huntsville Hospital by ambulance with severe injuries but he will recover. An investigation is being conducted by the MNR with the assistance of Corporal Steve Adams of the Minden OPP.

Local signs to increase

Since my election to the Legislature in 1975, I have supported many initiatives which I felt were important. One proposal which I have consistently supported during the last eleven years has been a desire for more signs on our highways.

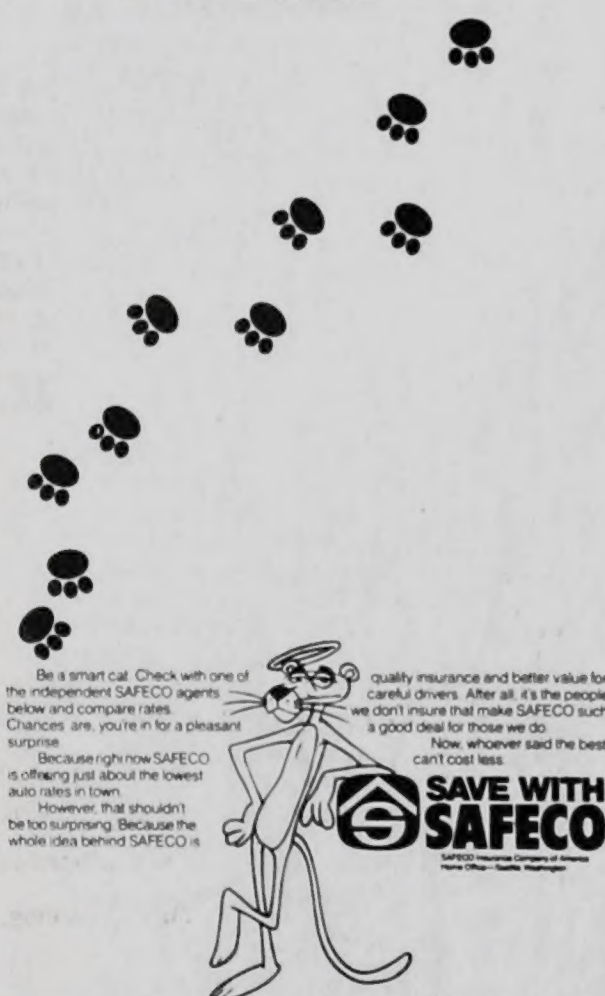

Each year, thousands of tourists visit Ontario. However, many of our best tourist attractions are difficult to find or are ignored because they are not noted on the province's highways. However, this problem does not concern just tourists from outside Ontario. Many of our visitors to Victoria-Haliburton bypass some of our best attractions because of poor signage.

For years first-time visitors to the Kawartha's often found it difficult to drive to Bobcaygeon due to the lack of a sign at the junction of Highways 35 and 7. Fortunately, with the support of the Village Council, I was able to convince the Minister of Transportation and Communications to erect a sign providing directions to Bobcaygeon. Similarly, I lobbied for some time for a sign giving directions to the Kirkfield Lift Lock. A sign was finally erected last summer.

Well, I am happy to report that after ten years of letters and speeches, something is finally going to be done to increase the number of signs in Ontario.

The Ontario Public School Teachers' Federation, Haliburton District, now has six teachers in its 25-year club. The veteran teachers are Howard Higgins, left, Garreth Kellett, John McLennan (new member), Doug Devolin, Bill Gliddon (new member), and Stuart Baker. New members received their pins at the spring dinner on Wednesday.

Teachers receive service pins

By JOHN JANSEN
Staff Reporter

Teachers from Victoria St. Public School, Hodgson Elementary and Archie Stouffer Public School were at the spring meeting and dinner of the Ontario Public School Teachers' Federation on Wednesday night.

John McLennan of Archie Stouffer Public School and Bill Gliddon of Haliburton were presented with 25-year pins for their long years of service as teachers. They joined four other members who welcomed them into the 25-year club.

Guest speaker at the dinner was Constable Gary Chapman, community services officer from the OPP detachment in Minden.

Chapman spoke about a variety of subjects both professional and personal. The 22-year member of the OPP called the Minden posting "a very easy one to work in."

"We get to do our own thing and we're not too close to Toronto," he said.

Chapman very much wanted to come to Minden when he was posted in Toronto and was lucky to get the assignment, he said. He has been here for 15 years and does not plan to move before he retires in four years.

He also spoke about the V.I.P. program he helps to run in the schools for Grade 6 students.

"At that age it's important to let the kids see us under more pleasant circumstances, not when their parents might be pulled over for a spot check or some traffic offence."

"Many parents make the mistake of using the police of some sort of boogey man against their children. I get a bit angry when a parent pulls his child away and says, 'Be good or he'll take you away.' The V.I.P. program gives us the chance to go in and make a better impression."

Chapman told the teacher that in some ways their jobs are similar because neither teachers nor police officers are constantly monitored.

"When you get instructions from a principal to give the kids half an hour of homework a night, you have to do it. And when we get orders to be stricter in handing out tickets we have to do it too."

A particularly unpleasant and damaging possibility for teachers in public school is that one day a student might accuse them of doing something "untoward", Chapman said. But he assured the teachers that such incidents are taken very seriously by the police.

Board of Education...

The Haliburton County Board of Education met last Tuesday to consider the following items of business:

Trustees defeated by a narrow margin, a motion that would have banned smoking in the board office and restricted smoking in schools. The motion stated that "in an effort to take a leadership position in the matter of moving toward a smoke free environment, the Haliburton County Board of Education declares the Board Offices as a "smoke free area", commencing June 1, 1986. From that date onward, no Trustee, employee, guest or community group will be permitted to smoke in the Board Office building."

The motion also directed each school staff to decide on one location only in which smoking would be allowed. This location in each school must not be visible to any student. "All employees, guests or members of community groups who wish to smoke in the building must limit their smoking to this one designated area" the motion said. The vote which defeated it was not recorded.

Due to declining enrolment, staffing in the schools of Haliburton County will be reduced as follows: Cardiff Elementary School - one full time teacher; Dorset Elementary School - one full time teacher; J.D. Hodgson Elementary School - one full time teacher; Haliburton Highlands Secondary School - 1/2 time teacher; effective, September 1, 1986.

The Board decided it will operate the Dorset Elementary School as of September, 1986 as a Kindergarten to Grade 3 school with one teacher.

Actual expenditures for April, 1986, in the amount of $702,386.96 were approved.

The resignation of Gordon Sharpless, effective June 30, 1986, as transportation provider for handicapped students, was accepted "with regret".

Dawson Insurance Brokers Limited were authorized to make available through the schools a Student Accident Insurance Plan for all students for 1986-1987.

Juliane Quartel will be offered a Probationary Contract to teach full time for the 1986-1987 school year.

Cottagers repair sewers

Sixty cottage owners on Horseshoe Lake and Lower Paudash Lake have repaired their sewage disposal systems since they were inspected and found faulty last summer.

The ministry of the environment inspected and classified the sewage systems of 930 cottages on four lakes in Haliburton, Hastings and Muskoka as part of the Cottage Pollution Control Program started in 1970.

On Horseshoe Lake in Anson, Hindon and Minden, 120 or 42 per cent of 289 systems were classified as seriously substandard. Another 49 (19 per cent) were unsatisfactory and nine (three per cent) were direct polluters. Of those, 47 were corrected by the end of last year and 13 owners have agreed to fix their systems this year.

A seriously substandard system is described as one that "does not meet current standards of design, construction and location, is in a state of neglect or has a limited life." Although such a system is not a pollution problem at inspection time it will not be able to treat sewage in the near future, the ministry says.

An unsatisfactory system is classified as one that improperly disposes of solid waste or wash water "on the surface of the ground either directly through a waste pipe or escaping from a leaching pit or some part of the sewage disposal system."

A direct polluter is "a system which is permitting sewage or leachate to contaminate the ground or surface water."

On Lower Paudash Lake 127 or 50 per cent of 256 systems were seriously substandard, 37 (14 per cent) were unsatisfactory and one (less than one per cent) was a direct polluter. Thirteen of those systems were corrected by the end of last year and another three owners agreed to make repairs this year.

The survey of systems was conducted by crews who interviewed owners and surveyed lots to collect information about the number of occupants and type of sewage system.

A report from the central region director of the environment ministry, G. Mierzynski, said "The co-operation of cottage associations contributed greatly to the success of the program."

plant include Spence and Dockerty through their holding company which owns Edgewood Potteries, and Carlson Mines, an Ontario company which has a large clay deposit among its holdings and wants to develop it as a replacement for the ceramic clay Edgewood and other companies now import from Tennessee. Carlson would work closely with the principals of Edgewood to develop formulas that would make its clay marketable.

Overall value of the Haliburton project would be $2.5 million, of which $1.1 million represents the cost of the plant, $1 million for machinery, and $400,000 in administration and other start-up costs. The company hopes to obtain $800,000 through provincially assisted sources, and $600,000 from federal sources. The balance of $900,000 would come from private equity, including $500,000 from Spence, Dockerty and Carlson Mines, and $400,000 from outside investors.

Local investors are being asked to purchase preferred shares in the venture, in minimum amounts of $5,000. The shares would bear interest at approximately bank prime rate, but no interest would be paid until the end of the fifth year, at which time and investor could recoup his money plus accumulated interest, or could convert the preferred shares to common shares, based on $400,000 representing 24 percent of the Haliburton company.

Dysart et al has agreed to take preferred shares in the new venture in exchange for the land and improvements, said reeve Fearrey, who noted that he has "no fear about what we're doing."

Dockerty said he and Spence are certain they have "a very viable project" which will be very profitable within five years.

The two men hoped the plant would be operational by October when they began discussions with council, and while that may not be possible, they emphasized that they will proceed as soon as funding commitments are in place.

Detailed information about the proposal is being made available to prospective investors, and while no formal commitments were made last Thursday, it appears that a number of local people are interested in backing the project.

Sharing some opinions on tourism with John Eakins, Minister of Tourism and Recreation, is the Canadian Consul and Trade Commissioner for Western New York, Durban Morrow. Listening in is one of the participants in the familiarization tour which was in Haliburton on Saturday to learn of what the area has to offer.

The Haliburton Highlands Guild of Fine Arts honoured four long-time supporters at its annual meeting last Thursday night. President Joan Hoad, left, presented honorary memberships and Mary Wallace batiks to Catherine Wilkinson, Grover Springer and Peggy Fawns. Muriel Allport, who was unable to be present at the meeting, was the fourth recipient of the Guild's recognition. A new board of directors also was appointed at the meeting, which was well attended.

Four Guild members are honoured

Four long-time friends of the Haliburton Highlands Guild of Fine Arts were honoured on Thursday night at the organization's annual meeting. Catherine Wilkinson, Muriel Allport, Peggy Fawns and Grover Springer were presented with honorary memberships and batiks made by local artist Mary Wallace in recognition of their participation in Guild activities over the years.

President Joan Hoad gave a brief outline of the four 'friends' contribution as each was called up to receive the batik.

Catherine Wilkinson's association with the Guild has been a long one. For many years she helped organize staff for the Guild summer exhibition and sale. A former member of the Guild's board of directors, she organized a successful variety concert night involving school choirs from across the county. She also played a large part in setting up the original quilt group in 1980 which produced a quilt for the annual fund raising raffle.

Muriel Allport's association with the Guild dates back to the earliest days of the summer exhibition, at which she frequently served afternoon teas and helped out in many other ways. She also has been an avid quilter and rug hooker. She was unable to be present at the meeting, and will receive her batik and membership at a later date.

Another long-standing member of the Guild is Peggy Fawns, who holds the distinction of being the first paid-up member of the organization. She served on the board of directors for two years, was a keen quilter and a leading member of the rug hookers' group.

Grover Springer also has been a friend of the Guild for many years. A former bank manager, he has attended to the banking, accounts and record keeping demands of the summer exhibition and sale since the days when the Guild's End Gallery first opened. He is also admired for having quietly and on his own initiative, planted flowers at the Gallery through many spring seasons.

The Guild president also used the occasion to inform members of some of the Guild's activities over the past year, and to compliment people who have made a particular contribution to the organization's successes. In past years the Guild has struggled under the burden of deficits but tighter financial controls now have been implemented, fund raising efforts have been stepped up, and the organization is on sounder footing than previously, Hoad said.

Public relations have been a particular priority of the Guild's board for the past two years, and a number of projects have been undertaken to assist the organization in reaching out to the community. An artist-in-the-schools program was put in place with the help of Chuck O'Neil, Mary Wallace, David Risk, Kevin Dunlop, Mario Hill, Gallen Valleau, Gloria Carnochan and Roger McGill, and proved successful. A 'think tank' was held last September to discuss the concerns of long-standing members, and as a result, social evenings were held to foster fellowship and exchange among the different Guild groups, Hoad said. A central register of members also has been compiled, and a regular weekly column on Guild happenings now appear in The Echo through the efforts of a four person writing group, who share the task.

The Guild president complimented Gallery Curator Chris Lynd and staff members Heather Scully and Norma Douglas. As well, she emphasized "the very real strength and support the Guild receives from its association with Sir Sandford Fleming College" and northern campus administrator Barb Bolin.

A new board of directors was elected at the annual meeting. Those who will serve on the board for the next year are: Thelma Dair, Mike Easton, Dr. Harry Good, Mary Hastings, Joan Hoad, Linda Beachli, Dorothy Baker, Barb Bolin, Mimi Carson, Jean Farrell, Virginia Muenzel, Barb Peel, Len Pizey, Peggy Podmore and David Risk.

All ages partake in walk

Dianne. Last year's youngest walker, Aleka Lilius might have been usurped of the title but she was not to be outdone as she "strolled" along the 20 km course with her mother and sisters.

The oldest walker was Norm Wallace, who at 81, decided to join everyone else for the first time. "I think it's a very good thing that's helping people in need."

There were also walkers of the three-legged variety. Jake, a dog with only three legs, took part in the walk, even though his owner, Neil Hutchinson, a member of the HAVE committee, wasn't able to participate since his ankle was covered in a plaster cast.

Then there was the entire Duncombe family either walking or strolling the route. Lynn and Lon Duncombe along with their children Amanda, 6, Ian, 4, and Claire, 1, all had their best walking shoes on and part of the children's money came from their own piggy banks especially filled with money for the cause.

Harry Terpstra, a teacher at the Central Park Senior Public School in Oakwood, heard about the walk through the Kawartha Baha'i Community and started a campaign at his school which raised pledges of $35 a kilometre, or $700 in total.

Providing little bits of interesting information about the flora and fauna along the route was 'Dr. Nat', commonly known as Dave Mowat, a biology teacher at the who ran the 20 kilometres in one hour and 18 minutes, followed shortly by Bob Heyes.

Many of the students from the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School might not have been able to wake up for the 8 a.m. start after they tired themselves out the night before at a dance at the school, but the money that was raised at the dance, $600, was donated to the walk. The students' council high school. He was on hand with his equipment to test the water for Ph levels and gather some plankton from the lakes. Answering any questions the walkers might have, he also explained what the early settlers in the county used to do with all the various plants found in the water.

The first walker to complete the course was 19-year-old Mark Carl chipped in a further $400 to bring the total donation up to $1,000.

Dollar for dollar, the Canadian International Development Agency will match all the funds raised through the Walk for Water, and organizers and walkers alike will be proud to know they raised approximately $22,000 to help others build fresh and clean sources of water.

strengthen our sense of community."

With the museum's variety of interesting artifacts, Barnes said, "You are indeed a touchstone for the Highlands."

Reeve Fearrey agreed with the remark, adding that the additions to the museum "is just one more step towards making Haliburton a destination attraction."

Giving money to help develop our historical resources is not always a popular idea among the ratepayers of the county, making the expansion even more special since "it's a tough thing to make go," Fearrey said.

Reading a letter from local MP Bill Scott, who was unable to attend the ceremonies, Joe Iles offered his congratulations on a job well done and that the "museum is certainly a source of pride to the community."

It was the secretary of the museum's board, Larry Podmore, who gave the audience a brief background of the three new buildings.

First is a settler's cabin from Lutterworth that was built in approximately 1870. It was reconstructed to appear exactly as it did a century ago and though a new roof had to be built, workers used the same materials and styles that were employed originally. While the home will be standing in Haliburton, Podmore reminded everyone "it is a representation of what happened in the county."

Beside the cabin is a barn donated by the Douglas family. On Saturday it was filled with cider and homemade cookies, but in the future, visitors can view some of the old farming equipment.

Then there is the old freight shed which used to stand across from the Echo office, and will be used as a display area.

The museum also had some wood ready to be cut to make the "essential shed outdoors" and Podmore joked that he hoped Davis would be on hand to be the first person to sit in it.

"I hope you realize this is a beginning and we'd like help from the community," said Podmore, adding that the museum would appreciate any donations it could receive, whether financial or historical.

The guests, which included a strong representation from the Haliburton Legion, were then invited to view the buildings and enjoy refreshments.

rism, was at the Wig-a-Mog to welcome the guests and give them his support and encouragement. Everyone was piped into dinner by Earl Cooper, who was also playing outside with his son Andrew and drummer Gord Kennedy and Faith Stephenson then did the Highland Fling with his accompaniment. Taking a chance

For a great many years, local people have known that the community could benefit from, and indeed must someday have, a variety of light, non polluting industries to supplement the employment opportunities that arise from tourism and cottaging. It has however, been one thing to know it and quite another to do anything about it. The area's distance from major urban markets, its relatively poor transportation routes, and its low profile, have combined to thwart local politicians and other interested citizens who have tried to boost economic development through reaching out to established manufacturing businesses. Bracebridge, Lindsay, Huntsville and many other nearby communities were big enough to attract new industries, yet small enough to offer a quality of living that appealed to company executives and their labour forces. Haliburton was too small and too isolated to be noticed.

Over the years, local people have experienced so many false hopes that they are cautious when new entrepreneurial schemes are made public, particularly if those schemes promise a substantial number of jobs. Too often they have heard would-be business tycoons expound the virtues of new schemes that are certain to succeed provided someone else - the government or local people - will pay for them. Nothing has come of these schemes because they have not been soundly planned nor solidly financed.

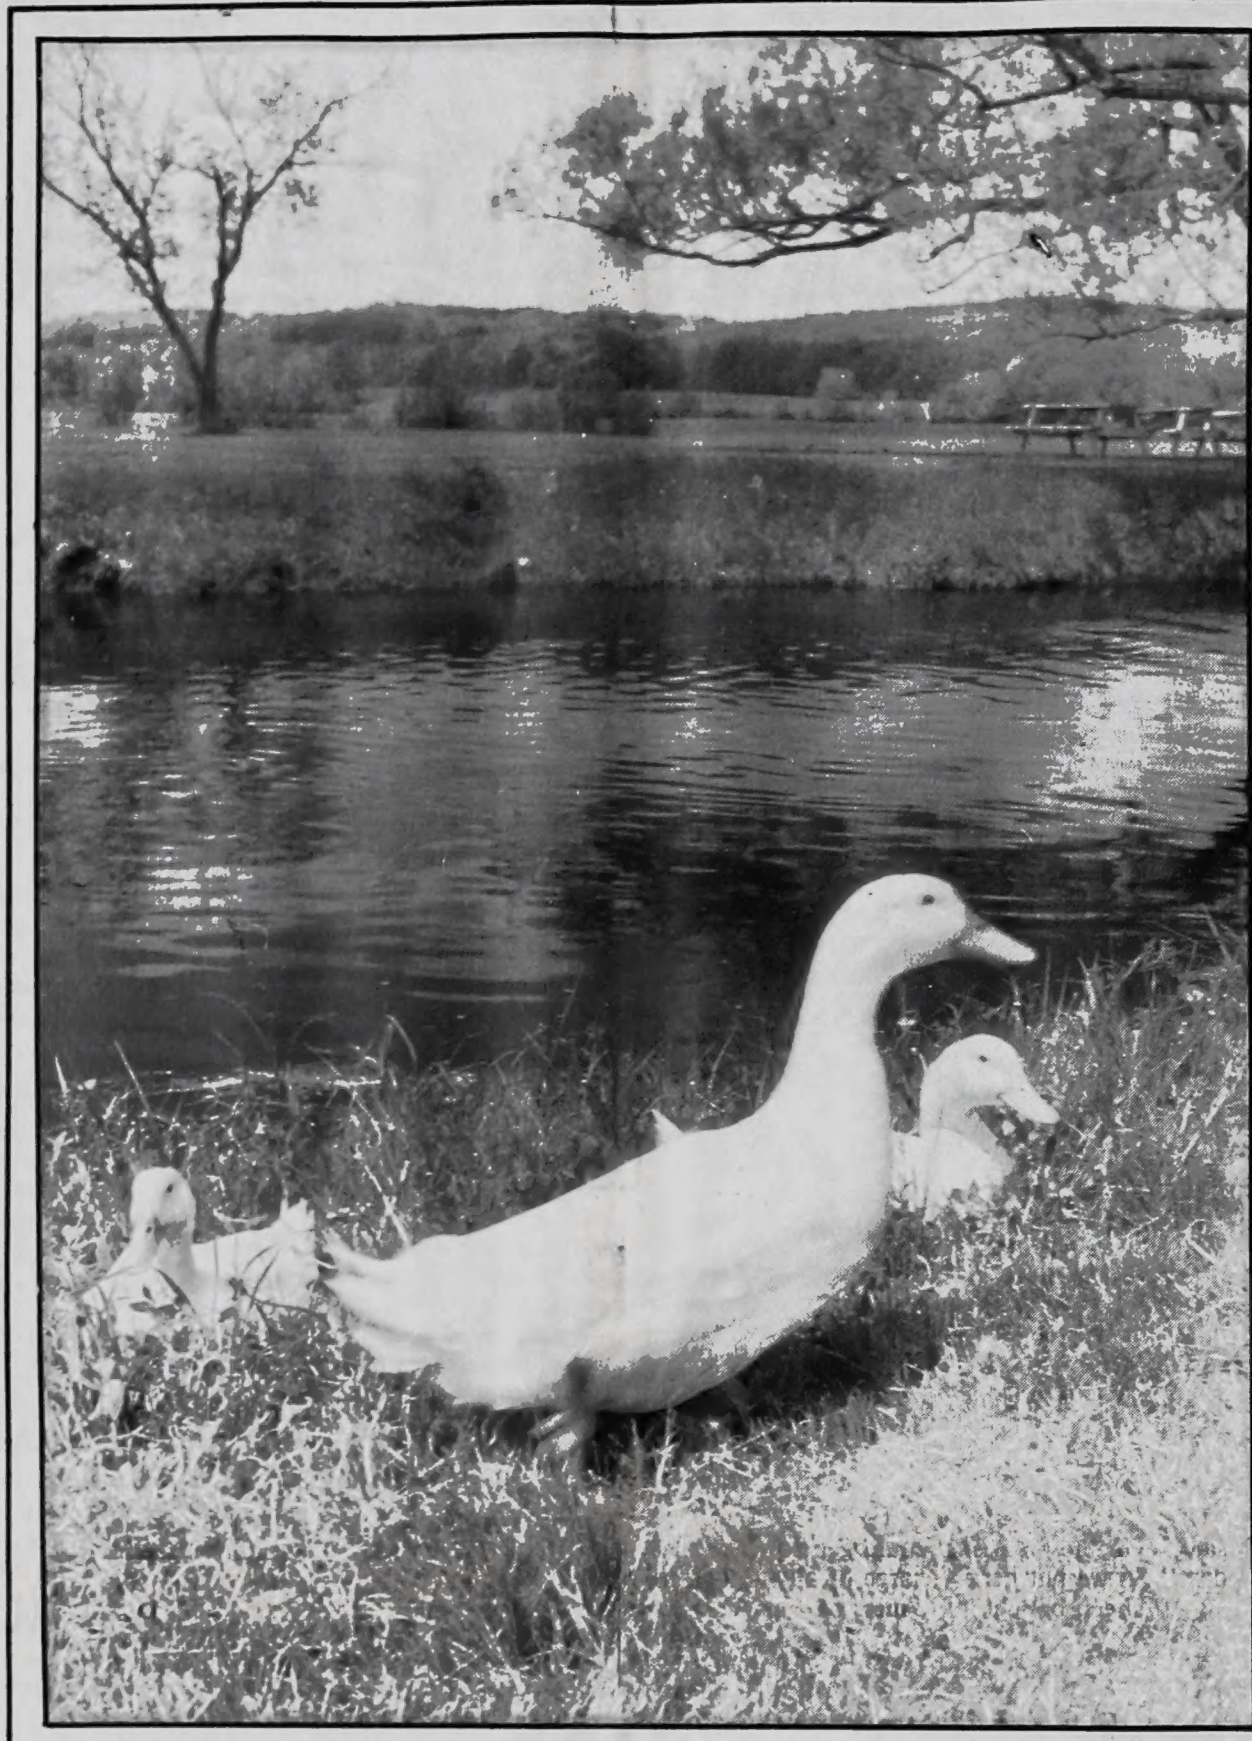

It was understandable then, if the people who attended a meeting at the Dysart community centre last Thursday night weren't quite bowled over by the idea of a pottery factory in Haliburton. They came to listen, but they were prepared for yet another disappointment.

This time, however, something different is being proposed, as quickly became clear to the two dozen or so people who were on hand. Dysart et al reeve Murray Fearrey set the tone by explaining the scope of council's commitment to the project, which would include providing the land and servicing it in exchange for preferred shares in the new venture. Fearrey said the municipality has been impressed by the initiative of the owners of Edgewood Potteries, a Toronto-based company that produces and markets ceramic products in Canada and the northern United States.

The Edgewood Potteries proposal is attractive for a number of reasons, but the two most obvious are that the company already has a proven track record, and that its principals are prepared to risk their own money to help fund a Haliburton plant. Some of the company's products were on display at last Thursday's meeting, and they appeared to be of high quality. It is reasonable to assume that with good management and skilled marketing, the company's sales will continue to grow, putting the Haliburton plant on solid footing within five years.

The plant itself would employ 40 people initially, with projections for 71 jobs by the end of the fifth year. If they proved realistic, this would be a substantial level of employment indeed.

There is risk in the scheme of course. Few business ventures are 'sure things', and no one can predict accurately what kind of market and monetary forces will come into play over the next five years. But if the company's projections are reasonably accurate, and if the record of sales increases is as impressive as was stated last Thursday, then the proposal is a very appealing one indeed. It seems likely that if other sources of funding can be obtained, many local people will be willing to assist the venture by purchasing preferred shares. Their willingness to accept the risk may just make the difference in providing a substantial number of the industrial jobs that the community has wanted for so long.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

It is with pleasure that I write this letter on behalf of the newly formed Writers' Group. We wish to thank you, Mr. Len Pizze, for taking time from your busy schedule to be our very first guest speaker.

On Wednesday, May 21 approximately 12 people, namely members of the writers' group, and several of the Echo community correspondence writers, met at Lakeview School and were pleased to welcome Len Pizze.

He told us of his beginnings in the newspaper business in a small town just outside of London, Ontario, and then how he decided to come to Haliburton, where he ultimately became the editor, business manager and jack of all trades for the Haliburton County Echo.

Some of the interesting things he mentioned were that more people read weekly newspapers than the large daily newspapers - also that a good community newspaper is a great asset to the well being of a small town. The reporters write stories about people living in the community, that you probably already know or certainly will get to know - but not about people you could not possibly meet - such as in the larger cities.

He went on to say that the Echo is very costly to produce and that advertisements are most essential to the success of any newspaper. There are approximately 5,000 copies of the Echo being sold each week and at least 10,000 people are reading these papers.

He suggested that everyone should pass on interesting stories about people and "happenings" which go in the various communities, as it is a vast county to cover and the reporters could not possibly know all about everyone and everything.

There were numerous other things he mentioned and we were most interested in everything he had to say. After he took us through the Echo and we actually saw how the newspaper was systematically composed. This is a very intricate and complicated procedure and we were fascinated with each step the paper has to be processed before it is time for it to be printed. Incidentally the newspaper is actually printed in Bracebridge and this is another complicated procedure.

Thank you again, Len Pizze, for being our guest speaker.

Sincerely,
Shirley Hodgson

On good hearts and gathering news

If it is true that small communities have a heart - that people care for each other in a more obvious way than they do in the less personal environment of the cities - then Haliburton's 'heart' is beating strongly. That was abundantly evident last Saturday, when a group of enthusiastic walkers - and a few very energetic runners - covered the 20 kilometre distance in the annual Walk for Water. By giving up a Saturday of leisure, the walkers raised about $10,000 for water projects in rural India. It is a particularly worthy cause, and the amount of the pledges indicates that local people know it. Walk for Wells is an inspiring example of the concern that many people have for their fellow man. Its success is well deserved.

If you notice some small differences in the Echo this week - in the size of the type certain stories are set in - it's because we have been plagued by technical gremlins. One of our two typesetting machines, the one on which all of our news stories, features and classified ads normally are set, ceased to cooperate early Monday morning, setting off a round of long distance phone calls, logic board replacements, keyboard substitutions and screw driver twisting, all to no avail. Typesetter Debbie Bates took it all in stride, moving over to our second machine whose primary purpose is to produce advertising copy, and working extra long hours so that we could get the newspaper out on time.

The computer age has many marvels, but the wonders cease when the 'bleeps' go silent.

Recently I was asked to speak to a group of local writers who wanted to know more about the

The summer season is just beginning with its nice sunny days, warm weather and everything that goes along with that wonderful time of the year. What a lovely opportunity we as local residents, and visitors who will be coming here, have to look around and see just how lucky we are to have clear air, beautiful trees, lakes and rivers to sit back and enjoy. We won't always have these gifts of nature if we keep allowing litter to be strewn all over the place, pop and beer cans, boxes and what have you to be dumped into our lakes and rivers. I find it very annoying and disturbing when I see people polluting our lakes and littering our countryside. Why can't we all understand that it is up to each and every one of us to protect our environment if we expect to continue to enjoy it. There is simply no excuse for this litter to be on the ground and in our lakes.

According to the Thursday Post a decision by the Victoria County Board of Education to close some of the schools in the northern part of the county has been delayed. At the management committee meeting held earlier this month, it was recommended that schools in Norland, Cobocok, Burnt River, Kilmount and Kirkfield be closed and two new schools constructed. The management committee wanted to see one new school in Burnt River and one between Cobocok and Kirkfield. Many residents in the areas affected want the schools to remain open and say the board of education should be putting money into upgrading the schools instead of building two new facilities. About 60 of those residents were out in full force at a recent meeting trying to get the board to reconsider.

The West Guilford Recreation Centre is sponsoring an essay contest in conjunction with their annual Canada Day celebrations. The subject of the essays will be "How Can Canadians Help to Promote World Peace?" All students attending the J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School will participate in the contest as part of their creative writing program for the month of May. One winner will be declared from each of the following groups: Grades 3 and 4, 5 and 6 and 7 and 8. Each winner will receive a framed copy of their essay and a trip to the Ontario Parliament buildings as a luncheon guest of our local M.P.P. John Eakins, Minister of Tourism and Recreation. There seems to be a great deal of interest in the contest and we look forward to seeing the results.

Keep it in mind that the Haliburton County Fair Beef Barbecue and Dance will be held on Saturday, June 14 at the Minden Community Centre (ice surface).

We often wonder if the people in Haliburton County who give of their time and effort in working with the young people receive the credit that they so richly deserve. We are particularly thinking of those who are teaching in our Sunday schools, youth groups, minor hockey, Boy Scouts, Brownies, Guides and other clubs. We salute these people and give them a hearty vote of thanks.

As I sat in the United Church at a recent Sunday morning worship service I couldn't help but think of the fine job the Royal Canadian Legion Branch 129 in Haliburton has done in organizing a cadet corps. On this Sunday the Legion Pipe Band, members of the Legion and the Cadet Corps were a colourful sight as they marched to the service at the Haliburton United Church. The newly formed corps, if for no other reason, will give these young people proper discipline that will make them better citizens in the future.

George Grant of Wilberforce was in the office the other day and mentioned to me that when he told me that there were only two men still living who worked on the I.B. & O railroad he was only thinking of the section men. He let me know that there are two others who worked on the train crew still living; Bill Glen and Jack Cox of Bancroft, Ontario.

Have you ever wondered what was going on in the world back in 1945? When I was in Curry Motors the other day Dale Emmerson presented me with a copy of The Evening Telegram dated Toronto, Saturday, April 14, 1945. The headline in this was "Berlin Break-in Imminent". The front page photo was of Harry S. Truman, the new president of the United States. And the paper carried a story on page two with the heading "Eden talks with Truman to clarify U.S. policies on International Issues". In the sports world, St. Michael's College Majors had just won the Memorial Cup over the western club from Moose Jaw.

Allan Bagg was in the office on Monday morning and told me that a four-way flasher was being installed at that very dangerous corner in the village of Eagle Lake right at the intersection. Apparently this flasher has been a long time coming and the people in the area are pleased that the Municipality of Dysart are installing it.

Just a reminder that the Kinsmen Home and Vacation Show will be held at Haliburton on June 13, 14 and 15. This year's show promises to be a good one.

Whenever I hear them playing "There's a small hotel" on the radio, there's one specific establishment that comes to mind. It's the Windsor Arms on St. Thomas Street, just south of Bloor and just west of Bay in mid-Toronto.

Small? Well, it was. According to a recent story in The Star, steps are underway to add $12 million, 20-storey addition with 98 more rooms. It seems that, whenever anything is successful and makes some money, the instant reaction is to make it bigger.

This place has been famous for its restaurants, the Three Small Rooms, and more recently for its Courtyard Cafe, where anyone who is anyone goes To Be Seen. If Toronto is Hollywood North, then this is the Ciro's, where the deals are made, the stars enjoy hanging out on their own time.

To me, it will always be famous for the way Big G Walters broke his lease. Because, from its beginnings in 1928 until the early 60s, the four-storey Windsor Arms was an apartment hotel. And by 1962, it was just a bit on the seedy side.

Big G Walters was a better-than-average and stranger-than-average rock 'n' roll disc jockey of the era, and at that point in time CKEY, where I worked, was knocking heads with CHUM for the top spot in that noisiest of occupations.

You can catch his older brother, Jonni, on Channel 11 locally from Kitchener with a nutty kind of show each morning. Jonni was also a better-than-average deejay in his time, good enough to be picked off from London, Ontario to go into the big time in Cleveland, Ohio, and from thence to U.S. television doing local interview shows -- but that's another story...

Big G had married an attractive lady who worked in the accounting department, and when she was expecting their first child she was able to quit work fairly early on. They leased one of the apartments in the Windsor Arms, which was within walking distance of the radio station, and provided maid service and linens. That made it ideal for a working couple who could afford the rent, and because of the transient nature of his work, had few furnishings or possessions.

Their trouble began when they found a house they both liked out on the Scarborough bluffs, Glen (which was Big G's real name) wanted it because he had been assured that it was haunted. I think his wife just wanted to get out of the tiny apartment downtown.

She may have been thinking of the baby, or she may have just been bored. She spent most of her days, it seems, sitting by the apartment window, feeding pigeons from a bag of seeds, hour after hour. She could collect quite a flock on her window sill.

The problem was, the hotel would not break their lease. There were a lot of arguments, and threats not to pay and so on, but a radio personality is vulnerable to bad publicity, and could lose his job if someone tried to collect the rent from his boss at the station.

So big G found his solution. One Friday afternoon, he and his wife packed some bags and made arrangements to spend the weekend with her family. Just before they left, they opened the front window and spread a nice bag of grain on the living room rug. When they had a collection of her pigeon 'friends' inside, they closed the window -- and left for the weekend.

And the rest, as they say, is history. When they returned late Sunday night, and went to the desk for their key, the bell captain took them to the luggage room, where there were a few cardboard boxes and a couple of suitcases stuffed with their possessions...and an envelope from the manager, containing a torn-up lease!

The story is that when the maid entered the room she fainted dead away. The manager claims to have counted over 40 healthy, happy, fat pigeons enjoying the feed at Big G's leasebreaking party. And none of them had ever been housebroken...

I always liked to tell that story whenever anyone invited me to lunch at the Courtyard Cafe, and I always wished I could say they lived happily ever after. But it was while they were living in their new home on the Scarborough bluffs that Big G was taken to court on a charge of biting the postman on the leg.

He claimed it was because his dog was on vacation. But that, too, is another story...

In 1927 Mr. and Mrs. Norman P. Smith, who at that time had a home in Toronto, came to Haliburton and built one of the first cottages to appear on Lake Kashagawigamog. This photo shows three men who some of you may recognize, and a team of horses pulling the stumps and clearing the property so that construction could begin on the Smith cottage. The Smiths have owned this cottage ever since that time but now make their permanent home in Millbrook, Ontario. The cottage is situated between Chateau Woodland and the Haliburton Highlands Golf Club. Thanks to Norman Smith for giving us permission to use this picture.

Any ideas for Granny Gardener?

Northern Lights

Virginia Muenzel

I've got this problem. I've got this semi-recovering Granny type person who needs a project. Just a little something to occupy her sitting down time until her legs are prepared to carry her around on a full time basis. If she was a knitter or crocheter, I'd have it made. We could set her up in the sweater making business, and we'd all have new, warm snuggles for the winter.

For a while, I thought we had the problem licked. Mom used to be devoted gardener. Maybe not as nutsy as I am, but she loved to get down on her hands and knees in the soil. While she was sitting outside in her wheelchair, watching me dig, she expressed the fact that she missed gardening. So we got her a bag of potting soil, and let her start all the indoor seedlings. A couple of weeks later, when I was weeding the flower beds, she said, "Oh, how I wish I could get down in that dirt." So we put her in charge of all the barrels and planters, bought her a mess of annuals, gave her a digger and let her go to it. It was quite a picture. Little Granny Gardener being wheeled up to waist-high barrels with her straw hat and apron. Her lap and her shoes full of dirt, smudges on her cheeks, and a determined look in her eyes. She was feeling useful again. But we're running out of pots to plant, and that hot summer sun is a bit much.

I wish I could arrange some kind of set-up where she could push herself between the rows of veggies and hoe out the weeds. Or start a rent-a-gardener service, where we could send her around to spruce up all the potted plants. She's also very good at pruning fruit trees. She can't do the actual cutting, of course. But she is a great director of pruning. She will make sure every excess branch is removed before she lets you rest.

It's really amazing, when you think of it. Mom hasn't done any gardening to speak of, in 20 years. But she remembers which tree branches to prune, which flowers like the sun, and which vegetables are most susceptible to the frost. Which goes to show you that some things you never forget.

Getting value for your money

Chamber of Commerce
by Shawn Hagerman

This past Saturday Haliburton County received full value for its investment in the Chamber. The wisdom of first building upon our strengths in committing to a three year administrative budget that would allow our manager to effectively promote our county, has paid dividends in abundance.

The long awaited 'Familiarization Tour' of over forty American travel writers, travel influencers, travel and marketing agents, came to town. The germ of the idea first occurred over five years ago, and it was our manager, Shirley Rapson, in co-operation with Valerie Telford of the Central Ontario Travel Association and others who put it all together. They selected and invited key people in the New York travel industry, arranged for their transportation, food, accommodation and introduced them for the first time to Haliburton County.

When I finally caught up with the group, at Wig-a-Mog, on Saturday night, they were a very tired but enthusiastic group. In the short time they had been in the county they had been introduced to the overwhelming hospitality of our tourist operators, community groups and individuals. They were piped by Earl Cooper and all, treated to Highland dancing, served hors d'oeuvres by Linda Beachli, and serenaded by Melissa Stephens, Nancy Robichaud and John Miller. The Guild of Fine Arts, thanks to Carole Finn, Chris Lynd and others, had set up a lobby display of our county's art and crafts. The Wig-a-Mog lobby was grandly decorated and flowers set up thanks to Nancy Brink. The Minister of Tourism, our own John Eakins warmly welcomed them after an excellent meal, courtesy of Art and Joan Ward.

I was seated beside a gentleman from Buffalo who has owned a travel agency there for over thirty years, yet this was his first experience or knowledge that Haliburton County existed. He could not believe how close we were to Buffalo, and what we had to offer his clients. He had been regularly sending them greater distances into the New England states, and here we were sitting on his doorstep.

A tour of this magnitude required extensive and meticulous planning. Its success will bode well, for the future of tourism in our county.

Sunny

I think I have created a monster. It raises its head every time I go to someone's house for a visit, but like a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, it has its good and bad sides.

Anyone who reads this column knows by now that I love to eat. And everyone knows that like most people who love to eat, I hate trying to fit into pants which won't do up because I have indulged in my passion too many times.

Since I have started to learn how to cook and bake, I have realized that half the fun of putting all that effort into it is watching someone enjoy it. Especially someone who appreciates the finer sides of butter tarts, cherry tarts, homemade cookies and basically anything that's filled with tons of calories and not much nutritional value.

My monster is that many times when I go into someone's house for an interview, they offer me food, usually of the fattening variety. Of course, if it's there in front of me I find it hard to turn down, and we wouldn't want to appear rude, would we?

So I eat. And eat. And eat. Plus I drink endless cups of coffee with plenty of cream and sugar and by the time I return to my car for the drive back to the Echo, I have to roll my way into the front seat.

On Sunday, I was invited to a retirement party to take pictures. On the phone, I had explained I couldn't stay for dinner but that message only got through to the person on the other end. I have such a reputation for eating now that it took me at least 10 minutes to get out the door, explaining quietly that I had some lamb chops waiting for me.

Then on Friday, a trip to Nada Vaughan's kitchen would not be complete without a sampling of some of her excellent baking. I stopped at two butter tarts, even though there were five dozen cooling in front of me.

But as I said, this monster has its good sides too. Last week I was in Eagle Lake, talking about how hospitable everyone there is. After spending the morning with Margaret Wallace, we were invited for lunch at her daughter-in-law's, Marie Wallace. While I was melting into a plate of homemade beef stew, the younger Mrs. Wallace went into her garden to fetch me some rhubarb.

Then after lunch, she took me over to Mrs. Staples', an old Scottish baker who saw me out the door with a jar of rhubarb jam, some marmalade and some lemon butter, all made in her kitchen. I was so laden down with goodies when I returned to my office, I almost needed help opening the door.

The rhubarb jam gave me a great idea and since Nada Vaughan had rhubarb recipes in her column (it's true that everyone and everything in Haliburton is related in one way or another) those red and green stalks of tartness were quickly transformed into three jars of jam and some muffins. Who can complain about that?

I'm afraid that now that I am telling you all of this, I will never be offered anything again. I truly hope that is not the case for as well as being a very friendly and giving group of people, Haliburtonians are also very good cooks.

Maybe what I'll do is stop eating lunch before I go to an interview, or at least no dessert. If my stomach grumbles and moans so be it. Or maybe I'll ask the cooks if they want me to take their dogs for a walk to help burn off some of those calories.

So please do not think that I am complaining. My monster only rears its ugly head when its mouth is open and it's hungry.

Echo has 'kept ahead' of changes

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

Who in their wildest fantasies would have foreseen back 10 or 15 years ago, as they hovered over the village of Haliburton, the changes that have taken place in this vibrant community? The empty lots on Highland St. - filled in with shopping centres with ample parking, the abundance of first class restaurants, the many, many boutiques with class merchandise. The jammed traffic flow with excited tourists and visitors - now, a typical summer scene to a growing vacation area for Ontario and beyond.

And you, Mr. Editor, have kept pace with the 1986 scene. Your Echo has in most cases kept ahead of the fantastic development taking place in not only the village but the County of Haliburton. Your news coverage - your pictorial photos and your newsy news has provided the impact to continue to make this the hub of tourism.

As you hover over Haliburton - 10 years from now - in your own "Echo Blimp" what will you "Editorialize" in 1996?

To The Editor:

I would like to express warm thanks to the HAVE committee and all others who helped to organize and run the Walk for Water on Saturday. The checkpoints were efficiently run, washrooms were frequently available, and support vehicles were practically ubiquitous. The signposts each kilometre were very encouraging, and by displaying the names of many villages in India they provided a connection with the purpose of the walk. The warm welcome at the end, available even to the last stragglers, was truly gratifying. Somehow the committee even produced perfect walking weather, cool and cloudy with no rain. Freya says to mention that the boat ride was great.

Congratulations to the HAVE committee for this wonderfully successful day - I hope that all newspaper business as it is practised in small communities. In the course of my little talk, I emphasized how dependant we are on our readers for many of the ideas that we turn into stories each week. Without ideas from the community at large, we must struggle, sometimes in vain, to come up with interesting articles. If you know someone or something that you think is news, or that would make an interesting feature, please give us a call. We're the first to admit that we don't know everything. If it hasn't been in The Echo, don't assume that's because we're not interested in it. No doubt it's because we simply don't know about it!

Athletes make all-Ontario

Seven Haliburton high school track and field athletes have won the right to advance to the all-Ontario championships in their respective events. The seven gained a chance to enter the provincial final by placing well in the Eastern Ontario regional meet held Friday in Ottawa.

Lesley Tashlin, who also made it to the provincial championships for high school track athletes last year, finished second in the junior girls 80 metre hurdles on Friday, and has a good chance for a medal in the final meet, set for this

Friday and Saturday at the Terry Fox Centre in Ottawa.

Jodi McKnight was another top finisher last Friday, gaining third place in the Midget girls javelin competition.

Among the boys, John Vanderhorst gained a place in the provincial final with a fourth place finish in the Junior 400 metre event.

Vanderhorst also qualified for the final in the open 1600 metre relay, along with HHSS competitors Ted Paish, Craig Burk and Alex Little.

Jrs. out-bat Haliburton Seniors 17-4

On Monday, June 2 the Haliburton Jrs. soundly defeated the Seniors 17-4. Tara Davies and Sue Ballantyne had an excellent night at bat for the Juniors, while Debbie Atkins pitched a good game to take the win. Wendy Roberts and Betty Whiteway shared pitching duty for the Seniors. The same night Irondale hosted Gooderham in the closest game yet of this season with Irondale winning 21-20 after coming back from being 6 runs behind in the 5th inning. Eileen Simmons was the winning pitcher for Irondale while Marjorie Bates took the loss for Gooderham.

On Tuesday night Guilford travelled to Minden and despite an impressive comeback lost the game 15-11. Minden was winning 8-0 at the end of the 2nd inning, however by the end of the 5th inning Guilford was on top 11-8 aided by a great effort by Cheryl Cooper. Minden came back in the 6th with seven runs lead by Trish Slavik and Jane Symons.

Grade 8 students' fashions modelled to perfection at show

By MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

There were some very well dressed Grade 7 and 8 students at the J. Douglas Hodgson School on Monday, and the best thing about their outfits was they were made by the students themselves.

The Family Studies seamstresses put on a fashion show that would be the envy of the more professional shows pictured in fashion magazines. The half-hour presentation was very well coordinated and everyone knew exactly what to do.

The show was broken down into three segments with emcees Kirsten Creelman and Noelle LaRue confidently intruding the styles and giving a bit of background about the thought and consideration that went into each model's design.

Many of the outfits were made from the same pattern, but individual tastes came out in the choices of accessories and colour. The wolf whistles were heard when a group of Grade 7 boys hesitantly took to the stage to model the chef's outfits they had made, but judging by the faces of the audience, the clothes and the show were very much appreciated.

At the end of the fast-paced presentation the students gave their teacher, Pat Bain some flowers in thanks for the help and encouragement they received. Representing the Home and School group, Linda Salvatori also presented Mrs. Bain with some flowers.

Other words of thanks were given to Ken Constable and Darcy Connaughan who provided the upbeat tunes at the show and to Ed Whiteway for his help in preparing the tape. Melissa Stephens was given praise for helping the students with the setting, as well as the Grade 7 girls who made the silk scarves which coloured the walls. For her help with Mrs. Bain, Mrs. Thayer was also thanked.

Walking proudly in hand-made fashions was a snap

Rain causes closing of the Trent River system

Submitted

Rain, which began the day navigation opened, Friday, May 16, resulted in the closure of navigation along the Otonabee River by Friday, May 23, and on Trent River by May 27. Re-opening of the navigation locks is planned along the Otonabee by Sunday, June 1, and Monday June 2, on the Trent.

Additional water collected in Haliburton area lakes brought them up to an average level of 95.3 percent by Monday, May 26. This is very near the 10 year average for that date. Some surplus had to be discharged from the Burnt River lakes where an additional rainfall had occurred on the 23rd and 24th. Only a small surplus, generally south of Minden, needed to be discharged from the Gull River.

Kawartha Lakes levels are receding quickly now; with Balsam, Cameron and Sturgeon back to the proper levels for summer. With only a modest rain from thunderstorms expected in the next four days, conditions should soon return to normal for summer.

Last week in the Legislature, my colleague, the Minister of Transportation and Communications, the Honourable Ed Fulton, announced our new efforts by our Government to further assist Ontario's tourism industry. We are introducing a new policy for tourism signs on Ontario highways. It is a policy designed to improve the current system by relaxing tourism signage criteria.

As the Minister stated in the Legislature: "Working in close consultation with the tourism industry and my colleague, the Minister of Tourism and Recreation, the Honourable John Eakins, we are announcing that more attractions and facilities now can be signed off provincial highways, in addition to freeways and staged freeways".

In addition, the Minister said, "We are continuing to investigate the use of highway signs in other ways such as the promotion of tourism in those municipalities where there is a potential to highlight locally known attractions, and the creation of more picnic and rest areas coupled with this upgrading of existing areas in the north and on freeways".

After 10 years, this is indeed good news for our riding and the entire province.

Paulette's presents a personal touch

by LEN PIZZEY
Editor

If enthusiasm and commitment pave the way to success, then the road ahead should be a smooth one for Paulette Blake. As the energetic and hardworking owner of Paulette's gift store in Haliburton, she has learned the skills of making a business grow without losing the personal touch that keeps customers coming back.

No one who browses in her carefully organized store with its extensive array of gift items, crafts, furniture and art, would see any evidence that the business had humble beginnings, but like most local merchants, she started in business with far less inventory, less attractive quarters and a somewhat different concept than the one she follows today.

Born in Sudbury, she grew up speaking French, and "hardly spoke any English" when she married her husband Michael and moved to Toronto. Today, although she has not forgotten her native tongue, only the faintest hint of it can be detected as she describes how she came to be in Haliburton. She and Michael had friends in the area, and the first time they came here for a visit "we were just totally captured." Another trip up from the city and they knew this was the place they wanted to live.

"It's a move we've never regretted" say Paulette, even though they were a little uncertain at first, and had the usual newcomers' problems in getting to know local people.

In 1973 they decided to go into business, opening the first Mike's Milk in the old Dr. Carroll house which has long since been torn down to make way for the IGA. People said it would never work, Paulette recalls, but they were wrong.

The store was a success. It was a demanding business however, and with two small children to care for, the seven day a week grind soon lost its appeal. After two years they sold the business to Mike Vuksic and moved back to Sudbury for a year. There, Paulette spent much of her time helping Michael's sister set up a gift shop, experience that was to prove invaluable for her subsequent ambitions.

In the spring of 1977 Paulette and Michael moved back to Haliburton and opened up the store that has grown to be the Paulette's of today. It was located under Mark's Cafe on the north side of Highland Street, and they named it 'Junk for Joy', inspired by the saying "One man's junk is another man's joy". The emphasis was on antiques and other used items. The business was modestly successful, but Paulette soon discovered that selling antiques is a difficult business. Items are hard to obtain and a seller has to be tolerant of people who complain about the prices, often commenting that their grandmother or great aunt "had something just like that, and she threw it out".

In 1979 the store moved upstairs to the space now occupied by Laurie Bonfield's Country Pickins clothing store. The name was changed to Paulette's Antiques and Gifts, and so was the emphasis, with more and more new items replacing used furniture and collectibles.

As the community grew, so did the business, until by last year, lack of space had become a limiting factor. When Mike and Lynda Easton purchased the old Feir house, moved it to another site and began to build three new retail outlets, Paulette decided she wanted one of them. Last summer, she relocated to the middle of the three stores and with more display space, increased her stock and the attractiveness with which it is displayed. By last fall the adjacent retail space was still unoccupied, and Paulette decided she would risk yet another expansion. But she was confident the extra space would pay off, and it has. Today, Paulette's is one of the largest retail stores in Haliburton and unquestionably one of the most attractive.

Paulette credits her husband Michael for part of her success. He has stood behind her as the business grew, providing moral support and boosting her confidence. He is a partner in the business, she says, although he does not actually work in the store during retail hours.

Haliburton is a good place to be in business, Paulette believes, although it takes patience and a long term commitment to survive the initial years and the seasonal nature of the economy. No people know better than local merchants how bleak things can be in off seasons, when cash flow is reduced but operating costs remain. Yet there is plenty of potential for those prepared to take risks and work hard.

"There is room for lots here if it's done properly," she says.

Owning her own business has been a satisfying experience for Paulette, who admits she likes to "call the shots and do my own thing".

Meeting people is one of the most pleasant aspects of her business, Paulette says. She makes a point of talking to everyone who comes through her doors, and encourages her staff to do the same, in an unobtrusive way.

"We're trying to have a good atmosphere" she says. "I feel it's really important to make people feel comfortable. I don't like people to feel pressured". She encourages browsing, but will

Bob and Ellen Fyfe talk a little baseball in the Sport Stop

Sport Stop welcomes all comers

by JOHN JANSEN
Staff Reporter

The Sport Stop, Haliburton's newest sports equipment store, has only been open for eight months but community response has been excellent, say owners Bob and Ellen Fyfe.

"There was a great response this winter," said Bob Fyfe. "The people in the community are happy there's a sports store in town so they can buy their equipment locally."

A look around the Sports Stop is proof that the Fyfes are serious about providing customers with all their sporting equipment. The store has the usual supply of hockey sticks, squash racquets and balls and cross country skis for the winter activities. For summer sports enthusiasts the store has baseball gloves and bats and bicycles. But there's a lot more.

The Fyfes have weights, karate wear, boxing gloves, watches and a full line of clothing. The wide variety will give the Fyfes a good idea of what will sell in the future.

"When you're new the salesmen don't come to you right away with their products," Bob Fyfe said. "Once you have a year under your belt and they know you can sell they come all the time."

Fyfe said he went into the sports retail business because there was a market for it in Haliburton. His 18 years of retail experience have helped him set up the store in the early months. Before the Fyfes opened the Sport Stop, Bob worked in construction for 10 years.

The Fyfes are looking forward to a busy summer and plan to stay open seven days a week in July and August and until 9 p.m. on Thursdays and Fridays to "get the tourist and cottager business. They'll hire a part time helper to give themselves a break during the summer season."

"Right now I'm just experimenting with all kinds of things people might want to buy," Bob Fyfe said. "After the summer I'll have a better idea what the people want and what is popular."

"I'm planning on getting some better bikes because they should be a good seller. If something sells I'll get it."

The Sport Stop is beside the newly expanded Paulette's store in Haliburton. Both stores have increased the shopping variety for the people of the community and cottagers.

Nada Vaughan's white thumb is famous

By MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Walking into Nada Vaughan's kitchen is like walking into your past, when the room was filled with the warmth of the hot oven and the fine smells of homemade meals and treats wafted through the air. There is always something coming out of that oven, whether it is a birthday cake for a Curry Motors employee, a tray of squares for the teachers, or a roast beef sizzling hot for expectant guests.

To Vaughan cooking is much more than tossing in a few ingredients and hoping they turn out. Everything she cooks or bakes is like a small token of her caring for others, and indeed, much of what comes out through the oven goes straight out the door and into someone else's home. Making people happy through her kitchen is what she considers her mission in life.

"In a small community there seems to be more a chance to reach out to other people and I do that with my baking," she says from her almost-famous kitchen. "I like to feed people and I like to give. I find giving is a very easy thing to do."

Ask the many people who receive a dinner tray from Vaughan when they are sick how her giving feels to them. Or the various friends and acquaintances who get to blow out the candles on a homemade cake. Then again, there's the 400 birthday cards and endless little notes that she sends each year. Whether it is an easy thing to do or not, Vaughan gives endlessly of herself to those who need it and to those who just appreciate it.

"I like doing things for people to let them know how special they are," says Vaughan, who uses her skills as a cook to reach out to people in a culinary way.

Nada and her husband Rick, a teacher at the high school, moved to Haliburton 13 years ago from Toronto, where she had spent all of her life up to that point.

She cried her way through that first summer, believing she wasn't going to make any friends and there would never be enough to keep her busy. But then she discovered Haliburton hospitality, with neighbours and members of the congregation at the United Church dropping by with some treat or a word of friendship. Later, when she had her daughter Rebecca, 21 meals were brought to her home.

"I couldn't believe it when we first moved here. There was a genuine love and caring and I have found it easy to return that."

The person who provided her with a lot of her inspiration to start giving through cooking was her next-door neighbour, Brenda Bain.

"I believe that God put us here beside Brenda Bain who taught me to use my talents to help others," Vaughan says. "I sort of feel I've been blooming where I was planted."

Of course there were a few mishaps as Vaughan found out that instead of being born with the gardener's green thumb, she had been given a white one. Her hands are always in her 100-pound flour bin which constantly needs replenishing.

Getting married was another step in finding cooking as a new-found joy and occupation. Cooking is always so much better if there is someone you can do it for, Vaughan believes, and it wasn't until she was married that she started thinking seriously about what was going on the dinner table that night.

"It's nice when you have someone to cook for," she says, even though she is constantly teasing her husband because he can eat and eat and eat without gaining a single ounce. "When you're a good cook it's hard to lose weight," is another of her maxims.

On the morning of the interview, Vaughan was in her kitchen baking five dozen butter tarts before she headed off to the United Church where she works part time as a secretary. In her fridge was a blueberry cheesecake she made the night before for a dinner she is invited to. Fridays are also her days of taking a plateful of goodies up to the high school for the teachers. The doctor's office also gets the occasional plate, as well as any of the workers at Curry Motors who are celebrating a birthday.

As word of her cooking expertise has spread, so has the number of requests for her catering services. Lately she is being asked to bake for several different events, such as the grand opening of Paulette's and The Sports Stop last weekend. She does all this, plus holds at least two dinner get-togethers a week.

"You do have to be organized," she answers when asked how she can find the time to do everything, and do it well. Before she starts baking or cooking she makes sure she has all the necessary ingredients so she doesn't have to make mad trips to the grocery store in the middle of a soufflé. She also makes sure to have on hand plenty of the staples she needs for cooking and baking. Every day she makes a list of what she needs to do and if she is planning a dinner, she will have it all written out too, from the veggies and dip to start to the coffee poured after everyone is quite full and content.

Over the years she has learned how to time a meal, knowing when to put the vegetables on the stove so they will be done at the same time as the roast. There is no microwave or food processor in her kitchen to make her job any faster so planning is the key word in meal preparation.

One thing she tries never to do is cook when she is unhappy for she finds that only food cooked with good thoughts will turn out right.

'I like to feed people and I like to give,' says the author of Nada's Kitchen

"I can't bake if I'm in a bad mood," she says, though it is hard to imagine Nada Vaughan in a bad mood. "If I'm miserable I won't have enjoyed doing it."

Every cook has her tricks and Nada is no exception. She finds it helps if she uses her hands, and asks you to notice they're "the only part of me that's thin." Because she cooks so much, she always has an eye open for specials and has found she enjoys baking with the margarine that looks like butter. Each month she will go through two 8 kg containers.

Her favourite recipe book is Harrowsmith and she swears by the recipes to be found in Canadian Living magazine — she can recognize all the ingredients and they are easy to find in stores. "I'd be lost without my Muffin Mania," she says. She also has found good recipes in books called "The Best of Bridge". Her husband bought her the 38-book series of cookbooks from Better Homes and Gardens and she is continually sending away for new recipes.

"I'm never afraid to try new recipes," she says, adding that she is always open to new ideas or ways of doing things.

Because of all the self-satisfaction she has received both from her cooking and the happiness it provides for others, the idea of writing a recipe column appealed to her, and she had thought about it for several years. It is hard to mistake her enthusiasm for cooking when she talks about this week's recipes, and sharing her favourites with others is just another way of giving. A future dream is to have a small and homey tea room where people can come and relax over a coffee and a couple of her famous butter tarts.

Until that dream can be fulfilled, she is quite content to continue on as she is — a husband, three children and a dog are already quite a few responsibilities to handle.

"The pay is poor but the benefits are numerous," she says, that irrepressible sense of humour showing through.

Zion Church keeps congregation busy

By MARIE WALLACE

At Zion United Church in Carnarvon many people meet together to keep the congregation active. All Christians need the fellowship of fellow Christians, whether they are praying together or working together in the church kitchens. This is one of the reasons why the men in the congregation of Zion United are hosting a spaghetti dinner to be held at their church. They invite you to the 'all you can eat dinner' on Tuesday, June 10 with two servings, one at 5 p.m. and the other at 6:15 p.m. You can buy your tickets at the church on Saturday morning, June 7 between 9 and 11 a.m. Those of you who have been involved in this type of function know that many hours of planning go into organizing a dinner. Hopefully everyone has enjoyed the process of working together in Christian harmony.

All choir members spend many, many hours together practising music for Sunday services and special concerts. I'm sure they benefit from the fellowship of their fellow choir members, but it is also necessary for them to share their musical accomplishments with others. The Junior and Senior Choirs of Zion United are preparing now for a "Berry Entertaining Evening" and you are invited to attend either Monday, June 23 or Tuesday, June 24 for the third annual musical evening and dessert, which features a large variety of strawberry desserts.

The United Church Women's group at Zion United has been rejuvenated — they went from 23 members to 32 members in one month. All ladies in the community are invited to their meetings and their next function is a Lawn and Bake Sale on Saturday, July 19 from 10 a.m. until 12 noon. At Christmas they invite 16 churches in our county to a beautiful ecumenical program, "Christmas in Carnarvon", in which all the churches can participate if they wish. It is becoming a tradition and one of the most meaningful services attended by over 100 women joining together in worship and adoration of their 'newborn' King.

I could go on and tell of the work with the young people in Carnarvon, but I plan to write a column on what is happening in our Sunday Schools and Youth Work throughout Haliburton County and the C.G.I.T. will be included.

"The Zion Spire", a six page bulletin, published by dedicated members of Zion United, contains reports of groups, obituaries, "Then and Now", and upcoming events. From "The Minister's Corner" I quote from Rev. Clyde Westhaver: "Two men were standing in front of a church that was being destroyed by fire. Above the roar of the flames and the noise of the firemen, the first man shouted to the other: 'This is the first time I ever saw you at church,' to which the second man replied: 'This is the first time I ever saw the church on fire.'"

When the church is on fire, it makes news. Some would say that when it is on fire with the Spirit of God, it makes news. But the Spirit can be present in the quiet routines of the church, from week to week. There is scripture for the fact that the kingdom of God can grow 'like Leaven' (yeast) which is noiseless but effectively permeates its surroundings 'until the whole is leavened.'

Rev. Clyde Westhaver will be retiring from the ministry this month - we wish him much happiness in his retirement; he will be missed by the people in this area.

The Horticultural Society took to the streets and the flower beds on Monday when its many members were on hand to plant the flowers which adorn the main street and Head Lake Park. From the left are planters Eleanor Holmes, Madge Thompson, Lyn Thompson and Terry Hartwick. All the flowers were purchased with the help of several local establishments.

'Believe in yourself,' Paulette says of business offer suggestions and points out certain items if people want the help.

For the most part, people who come to Paulette's are serious buyers. They're summer visitors and cottagers looking for something to take home to family and friends. They're local people looking for a present or just the right thing to compliment some corner of their house. Even children enjoy shopping at Paulette's, since she carries many small and inexpensive items that fit the most modest budget.

Paulette buys her stock at gift shows, from suppliers in Toronto, and from sales people who visit her store on a regular basis. She has thousands of items on display, and a substantial inventory to restock shelves, yet she manages to keep track of it all in her head, and feels she has no need for a computer, at least for the moment. She knows what sells and what doesn't, and makes her buying decisions accordingly. Slow moving items eventually are discounted and sold to make room for other stock. The inventory changes constantly, since many of the items she sells are produced in limited numbers and not offered again once they have been sold.

For now, Paulette says she is "quite happy and content" with the business, but she is "a gambler at heart" and doesn't rule out the possibility of new and equally ambitious ventures.

"You've got to take the chance. If you don't you'll never go for it," she says. "I'm a very enthusiastic, very positive person. That's how you have to think if you're going to survive and succeed."

"You've got to believe in yourself".

Motivating story

To The Editor:

We would like to thank you for the publication of the article entitled "Tory Hill woman promised phone in 1973 will have to wait, Bell says". This is the first support we have had in our long and frustrating struggle to obtain telephone service in our area.

In particular, we would like to express our appreciation to your reporter, John Jansen, for his thorough research into our problems with Bell Canada. The interest and concern he has shown for the dilemma in which we find ourselves, as well as his most constructive suggestions, have motivated us to further our efforts to procure this much needed service.

New exhibits open

Guild News

By VIRGINIA MUENZEL

June is upon us, and the countryside abounds with flowers. So what could be more natural than to present at the Rails' End Gallery, two fine exhibitions that compliment the season. "A Walk in our Garden" in the main gallery will feature mixed media pieces which will include ceramics, paintings, and fibre works centering on the floral theme. In the Waiting Room Gallery, the display is called "Floral Images", an exhibit of mixed media drawings by Paula Letki. The exhibits run from May 29 to June 21. On Thursday, June 5, Paula Letki will be at the gallery at 8:00 p.m. She is a familiar figure in Haliburton. An artist-designer who is living and working in Toronto, she has operated her own business, Letki Designs, for the past 14 years.

Sunday, June 8 is the official opening at 1:00 p.m. Flutist Melissa Stephens will perform, and refreshments will be offered. "A Walk in Our Garden" includes the works of 15 artists, two of them, Audrey Deremo and Mary Hastings, local people. The gallery is alive with flowers. Don't miss it. In conjunction with this theme, on Thursday, June 12, Leonard Shea will talk about "Easy Care Gardening" at 7:30 p.m. at the gallery.

On Thursday, May 29, the annual meeting of the Haliburton Highlands Guild of Fine Arts was held at the Haliburton Squash Club. It was very well attended, and it was interesting to note that the Guild is doing better financially this fiscal year. Four long standing volunteers were named as honorary members. They are Peggy Fawns, Muriel Allport, Catherine Wilkinson and Grover Springer. Congratulations are in order. Nine people were elected to the board of directors. They are Dorothy Baker, Barbara Bolin, Mimi Carson, Jean Farrell, Virginia Muenzel, Barbara Joy Peel, Leonard Pizze, Peggy Podmore, and David Risk.

The recently formed Guild Writers' Group will meet on June 11, at 10:00 a.m., at the Lakeview campus of SSFC. Members are asked to bring a lunch, and also a sample of their writing, past or present.

As you know, it's the time of year when the Guild is gearing up for the Summer Exhibition and Sale in July. Among the many events at this exhibition will be the Fashion Show which will be held on July 5, Saturday, at the Senior Elementary School library, at 2:30 p.m. All the handcrafted garments that will be modeled are from the summer show. And they will be for sale. Models will be craftpersons, and local high school girls. For more information, call Jean Farrell at 286-2843.

Finally, raffle tickets for a trip to Portugal are now on sale around town, and at the gallery. The raffle will run until Labour Day.

"Not too well done Harry."

Gas barbecues are a convenient and economical way to enjoy outdoor cooking, but they must be used carefully and kept in good condition.

Every summer, backyard chefs are injured and property is damaged in gas barbecue fires. Here are a few safety tips to ensure your barbecue parties don't go up in smoke.

1. There's only one way to connect a propane cylinder to a barbecue—the right way. Follow the manufacturer's instructions closely and keep the fuel hose away from any metal parts which may become hot.
2. Check for leaks regularly. Brush a soap and water solution over hoses and connectors and open the cylinder valve. If there's a leak, bubbles will form in the soap film.
3. Keep your barbecue at least 10 feet from buildings, overhangs and combustible structures.
4. Don't try to light a barbecue with the lid closed. If it fails to light or goes out, turn the gas off and wait five minutes before relighting.
5. When finished, close all valves.
6. Never bring propane cylinders indoors.

7. If you suspect your barbecue isn't working properly, have it checked by a qualified serviceman.

Make sure you don't have to invite the fire department to your next barbecue. It's plane fun flying with Stephen Wilcox

By JOHN JANSEN
Staff Reporter

At 7 o'clock in the morning Stephen Wilcox, owner and operator of Spectra Aviation, was ready at his mother's cottage on Pencil Lake to prep his plane for a flight to Toronto. En route he planned to land at one of his fishing camps where we would pick up two anglers for their return flight to Toronto.

The sun was already moving up in the sky as he walked out on the dock to ready his plane for the flight while he answered a reporter's questions. The pre-flight check is a routine he has done many times, but obviously important to a safe journey.

From the back of the plane he took a pump for sucking water out of the floats. All floats, no matter how expensive or well-made, leak a little bit. Pumping the water out keeps the plane as light as possible and saves fuel. Maximum load after fuel is about 800 pounds. A pair of floats, he said, can cost more than a plane. The ones on his craft, a Cessna 185, would cost about $15,000 to replace.

The floats are costly because making them is a very labour-intensive job. They have to be strong enough to take the force of the water pushing against them on landings and takeoffs, yet be light enough not to overly hinder a plane's performance.

While Wilcox was working on the floats he did a visual inspection. As a commercial pilot, he has to be extra careful about anything that might need repair. His plane, built in 1962, looks brand new. The paint is fresh and the inside is clean. But it's not the age of a plane that matters, but the total flying time.

Unlike cars, planes are serviced according to hours of flying time, not distance covered. Every 50 hours Wilcox takes his two planes to Toronto for maintenance and inspection. During the summer that can be as often as every two weeks.

With the floats free of water and the fuel levels checked with a dip stick ("It doesn't lie," he was ready to depart. He untied the plane from the dock and started up the engine. As it came up to speed he worked the rudder pedals with his feet and put on his aviator's glasses. Two rudders at the back of the floats steer the plane while it is in the water.

Pilots do not wear polarized sun glasses because they can affect depth perception on the water when coming in for a landing. It's important to have a true perception of how far the water is away to make a smooth landing.

Wilcox is not a big man, and as the plane sped down the lake, gathering speed for a takeoff, he was pulling back on the steering column with his whole body. Part of it may be the psychological desire to lean back as the plane begins to pull up its nose. The lift off from the water and climb into the air was as smooth as any jet liner. The water was calm and it wasn't extremely windy at the time.

Up in the air it's a whole new world. The ground looks like a carpet of tree tops. Lakes appear out of nowhere and rocks visible through the surface form shoals that can't be seen from water level. The roar of the propeller makes conversation difficult but not impossible. Words have to be spoken carefully and clearly to be heard. Like flying the plane, conversation requires more effort than on the ground or in a car.

He banked the plane towards his fishing camp. It didn't take long to get there, but distances can be deceiving in the air. Wilcox pointed to a lake surrounded by dense bush. It might be possible, he said, to portage a canoe but it would be difficult and "I wouldn't want to do it," he said.

The fishermen were out in their boat doing some last minute casting as the Cessna touched down. Like the takeoff, it was smooth and hardly noticeable. Firmly on the water, Wilcox throttled down the engine and taxied towards the camp.

Anglers David Barker, left, and Randy Niezen flew in from Toronto to spend five days fishing for trout on a secluded lake

The plane, now a boat, responded to his feet on the rudder pedals. He headed for the dock almost straight on, turned at the last minute and simultaneously opened his door, slid back his seat and jumped onto the float for a perfect docking. He secured the plane and got out to look at the camp.

Up on a hill there's a small cottage with plywood walls. Inside, there's a table, bunk beds, and propane-powered fridge, stove, heater and light -- just enough conveniences for fishermen to rough it without spending too much time on housework.

The two fishermen, Randy and David, had their equipment ready and waiting on the dock. They came in on one of the fibreglass boats with small motor that is provided at the camp. While Wilcox loaded the plane the fishermen tipped the boat and pulled it on shore.

They smoked a last cigarette and recalled how they had fished every nook and cranny of the lake from dawn till dusk every day. They caught a lot of bass, which they threw back because they were still out of season, and one trout. Their week was a success, they said, just relaxing, but they were ready to get on the plane and fly back to Toronto.

With two more people and some equipment in the plane, it still had no trouble taking off. Wilcox took the plane to the far end of the lake and was quickly airborne with plenty of distance to spare. In the air he turned the plane back to Pencil Lake for more fuel before the trip to Toronto.

Wilcox bought himself a fuel truck, like the ones that deliver oil to homes, so he can buy his fuel in bulk and pump it himself. The truck holds about 1200 U.S. gallons which is enough to keep both his planes going for almost two months. The planes hold 84 U.S. gallons stored in the wings.

Business is pleasure for Spectra pilot

By JOHN JANSEN
Staff Reporter

Stephen Wilcox is one of the few people who has been able to combine business with pleasure. For the past four years he's been combining his love for flying with the need to make a living, and he's been a success at the same time.

Wilcox is the owner and operator of Spectra Aviation, a company that does sight-seeing and charter flights, and offers fly-in fishing. From his office on Pencil Lake near Gooderham Wilcox has been running his business and yet he is still relatively unknown in Haliburton. He should become a more familiar businessman in the community this summer when he moves his office to Haliburton, where he now makes his home.

The greatest success of the flying business for Wilcox has been his fly-in fishing excursions. It's certainly now a new idea to fishermen but it's new for those who like to fish in the Haliburton area. Over the past few years Wilcox has taken a mainly far Northern Ontario activity and brought it down a few hundred miles to Haliburton where it is more accessible to people who live in Toronto and the Golden Horseshoe.

Some of the best fishing in Haliburton is on what Wilcox refers to as "my lakes". Legally, of course, they're not his lakes but they are his in other ways. Nobody without an airplane can get to any of the four lakes where Wilcox runs his fishing camps. And even if someone wants to try Wilcox isn't telling anyone where they are.

In the summer of 1983 Wilcox set up his company as a sightseeing and charter business. But after a few months he realized there was a market for fly-in fishing in the Haliburton area. Many passengers asked about doing some fishing on lakes that are inaccessible by car. He started to do some day fishing trips, flying people into a lake for the day and picking them up at night. By the end of that first summer he was planning his first fly-in fishing camp where he could put people up for a weekend or even a week.

The problems of setting up a fishing camp is that the lake has to be remote, which is easy to overcome in Haliburton, but it also has to have enough fish in it to keep anglers happy. Wilcox solved that problem by selecting a remote lake and stocking it with trout he bought and put into the lake himself with the use of his plane.

At the end of the summer of 1983 he started to stock his first lake. Unlike the ministry programs where small fingerling fish are stocked into lakes for removal in a few years, Wilcox stocked six-inch trout that would be ready to catch by the following spring.

The stocking idea was a gamble for the young businessman because it was such a costly thing to do. Each fish cost him about two dollars, plus the time and expense of using his own plane to bring them to the lake. But it was a gamble that paid off the next summer and is continuing to do so.

In the spring of 1984 Wilcox built a cabin on land he rented from the government for use as a fishing camp. He put up a 12 by 16 foot cabin with propane-powered refrigerator, stove, heat and lights. He brought in boats and motors and put in a dock.

Everything on that first lake and the three he added was brought in by float plane. There is no secret road or portage for bringing in equipment. Fibreglass boats were strapped to the side of an airplane and flown to the lakes. Wood was brought in and assembled on the spot.

That first camp was set up in about two weeks during the spring and was used throughout May and much of June. It was so busy he added a tent camp on another lake in the fall because the demand was so high and he didn't have time to build another cabin.

When the fishing season was over he replaced the tent with another cabin and started thinking about expanding even more.

After a successful season last year Wilcox added two more cabins. Today he is operating four cabins, fully equipped for up to four people, on four separate lakes, each stocked with its own supply of speckled and rainbow trout. This spring he stocked about 5,000 12-inch fish among his different camps. He expected to bring about 250 anglers into his camps in the month of May alone.

Some will fish for a day or a weekend and others will stay for five days. Some come just to get away from it all and are happy to catch a few bass, even if they have to be let go, drink a few beers and just relax.

Others will come in and take out up to 30 trout in a week. They'll fish every nook and cranny of a lake with expensive equipment. Wilcox gets all kinds of people who want to fly in and be alone on a lake.

Please turn to Page 12

From the window of Stephen Wilcox's plane the tree tops look like a carpet. Lakes that are inaccessible by car, and difficult to reach by foot, are no problem for a float plane. Wilcox has fishing camps on four lakes near Haliburton that he stocks with trout for the fishing pleasure of his customers.

Flying lesson for Echo reporter

In the air again, Wilcox explained some of the instruments on the dash board and how the plane works.

A magnetic compass and direction gyro tell him what direction he's flying. To measure speed there's an air speed indicator that reads wind pressure in a pitot tube. We were travelling at about 130 miles per hour and consuming 14 U.S. gallons an hour. The altimeter showed 3000 feet above sea level, or 2,000 feet above the ground (Haliburton is about 1,060 feet above sea level).

When he's in the air he can adjust the pitch of the propeller so it will slice cleanly through the air, or take a bigger bite. The adjustment depends on the wind and the amount of weight in the plane.

Unlike a car, a plane's engine turns at low speeds and produces greater horse power. The maximum engine speed in Wilcox's Cessna 185 is 2,850 revolutions per minute. (Some small cars' engines turn at 6,000 rpm.)

It sounds very technical, and indeed it is, but flying the plane is not very difficult, Wilcox says.

He started working on his private licence when he was 16 years old. A friend convinced him to take lessons at the Markham airport near Toronto. A year later he had his licence. Three years later he started his own sight-seeing business.

Flying south and west to Toronto the terrain below changed quickly from lakes and trees to roads and houses. Around Lindsay he invited me to take hold of the steering column in front of me.

"When you're flying," Steve said over the roar of the engine, "you pick a point in the distance and fly towards it. You keep picking new points as you fly."

"Turn to the right a bit," he said. Carefully I steered to the right.

"Now put it straight. The plane will keep turning to the right until you adjust it by moving to the left."

Most of the way to Toronto Wilcox was not holding on to the controls. If it's not too windy the plane will fly in a straight line until it is turned. When we got close to Toronto he turned on the radio and put on the headset.

While I snapped photos of the Toronto skyline Wilcox asked for permission to land. It was given and we came into the water without delay. The larger waves on the lake made a bumpier landing, but not as bad as I expected. The Cessna touched down near the foot of Bathurst Street.

He taxied towards a wooden ramp near the short takeoff and landing strips and powered the plane up onto it out of the water. Normally he would have docked but he was taking the aircraft in for its 50-hour inspection and maintenance. A maintenance man took the plane away on a hydraulic skid on wheels which he slid under the floats, raised, and pushed along in front of a truck to a hangar.

Wilcox's wife, Darlene, who is expecting their first child in August, said before the flight began that flying is different from other hobbies.

"They have to be flying all the time," she said. It's not like other hobbies. They really love it."

After an hour in a plane with Steve Wilcox it was obvious he needs to fly. In the pilot's seat he is content, and in control of himself and his craft; out of the plane he's only thinking of when he can get back in and fly again.

Stephen Wilcox, the 24-year old owner and operator of Spectra Aviation Ltd., sits in one of his two Cessna 185 planes before takeoff. Combining the pleasure of flying with the business of making a living has kept him happy since 1983 when he went into business.

Customer satisfaction up in the air, on the ground

The cost for fly-in fishing depends on how long the anglers want to stay and where they want to be picked up. Many fishermen drive to Haliburton and make the short flight to one of the lakes. Other fishermen who want to save themselves the trip will be picked up in Toronto and dropped off at the end of the week.

Virtually all the groups Wilcox takes to one of his lakes leave completely satisfied. That's because he knows how to treat his customers right and depends on 70 per cent repeat business. One reason to keep fishermen happy is because the fishing camps are more profitable than that sightseeing trips he does during the summer. He would have to do, and indeed does do, a terrific number of sightseeing rides to be profitable.

But Wilcox is also the type of person who likes to see others get their money's worth. He likes to do the extra things like visiting the camps during the week to see how the fishermen are doing. If they need something he will bring it in for them.

His approach to sightseeing rides is the same. He works in conjunction with local resorts to offer rides on specified days. He lets the resorts back the

Eyeglasses to be sent to needy

June 8 to 14 is Postal Employees' Week. You will find a box clearly marked and everyone is invited to stop in at your local Post Office and leave your old eyeglasses in it. The glasses will be sent to the less fortunate and enable them to see again. Also, if you have and I'm sure everyone has - pencil stubs and-or sheets of paper that have been used only on one side, bring them also, into your Post Office during the Postal Employees' Week. These will be sent to help the students in the third world. Isn't it sad that youngsters have to use pieces of pencils and used papers when we in Canada have so much? I'll certainly be over to the Post Office with a lot of it. I'm ashamed when I think of how much paper I waste, but honestly I never knew this was needed so badly in other countries. Get busy now, folks, those old eyeglasses aren't doing you any good and give lots of paper and pencils too. Let's fill up those boxes. We have only six days to do it in.

I must be getting old or something. I seem to find things tick me off so much easier these days. This so called human rights for instance. In my humble opinion it's so much pap. For instance: one morning this past week I tried for over two hours to get a phone call through to someone and finally decided to call an operator. She tried, only to inform me "line is busy". I knew the line was busy, that's why I called her. I'd been told before this, that no ring was coming into the house so I was checking, only to be told, "I'm sorry but we are not allowed to check into calls." I ask you, what's the point of dialing "0" to find out it's a busy signal when you already know that? Also, how about folks like myself, who have elderly parents who may be alone, or sick? How do we know if that person may be lying on the floor having tried to get to the phone? What about their human rights? That help could maybe arrive in time for them if the operator was allowed to find out.

The the school system: I love kids, all kids. I'm even raising one grandson, but it sure would be nice to meet some of them who can read properly, write neatly and spell correctly instead of the bad language, back talk and forever wanting more without any giving. It's sad, because the kids weren't born that way. Teachers are not allowed to punish any longer and the kids know it. They get sent to principals' offices, so what? They get out of doing their work. Then, many of them come home to an empty house so then what can they get into? It's getting so you can't chastise you own kids for fear you'll be charged with abuse.

A follow up to the Postal Employees' Week: erasers and chalk are also needed along with paper and pencil stubs. These throw-away items are gathered, sorted and shipped by the Rotary Club to the Dominican Republic where they are affectively used in the educating of children. The Post Office employees are supporting CIDA :Canadian International Development Agency), which assists people in the Third World. During the week of June 8 - 14 everyone is invited to drop off used eyeglasses, which will in turn be forwarded by CIDA to Third World countries.

Hello to Bev Timpson in Windsor from your Kinmount friends. I hope you're better very soon.

Sincere sympathy to family and friends of Clarence McKay who died last week.

Well folks, stay well and happy, read the Echo and call me at 488-2353.

Dairy calf scours is a problem that is as widespread as the dairy industry itself. It has plagued dairy calves throughout history and is still claiming the lives of entirely too many calves on dairy farms.

Practices such as sour colostrum vaccination, and antibiotic injections have helped producers to cope with calf scours, but they haven't tackled the source of the problem - disease build-up.

rides for him as part of what they can offer their customers. He sells himself to the resorts first and then to customers.

A big part of sightseeing, Wilcox says, is talking to the people while he's up in the air.

"You're up and down 15 or 20 times a day," he said. "Some people are a bit apprehensive about going up but once they get up there they're so taken by what they see the fear is gone."

The trick to doing sightseeing rides is to leave people wanting more, Wilcox said.

"Most people have an attention span in the air of about 15 or 20 minutes. When we keep the rides to that length it leaves them wanting more. It should seem they would have liked to stay up for just a little bit longer."

Once he starts doing sightseeing on rides Wilcox replaces the two blade propellor on one of his planes with one that has three blades to cut down on the noise. With a two-blade propellor the last few inches are moving at about the speed of sound when the plane is taking off. Using three blades gives the same total blade length but cuts down on noise both outside and inside the plane.

"We work hard to keep our customers satisfied," he said.

For Wilcox though, it's all pleasure when he's in the air. Perhaps that's why he works so hard to make the rides in his planes the best he can for all his passengers.

With Spectra Aviation, his business is his pleasure.

Margaret Wallace an asset to any village

By MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Eagle Lake has always been a thriving community, with many diverse and interesting people choosing the advantages of knowing your neighbour and friendliness over the faster pace of the cities.

When Margaret Wallace moved there 36 years ago the community had a sense of togetherness that is still evident today, even though it has grown in size over the intervening years, changing its makeup but not its warm atmosphere.

At 93 years of age, Mrs. Wallace is the perfect example of a resident getting involved in her surroundings and giving of herself to a village that has done so much for her well-being.

"The people are so friendly, right from the day we moved here," she says from her home overlooking the lake. "Eagle Lake is the friendliest community. They welcome you, they just take you in with them right away."

That friendliness was appreciated by Mrs. Wallace in 1950 when she and her late husband Carl moved to the lake from Scarborough, a place where Mrs. Wallace says there was virtually no sense of togetherness.

"We'd always had ideas of coming into this part of the country," after her husband semi-retired from his 25-year job as an accountant, remembers Mrs. Wallace. One of the houses they looked at was the large white house just past the bridge. When she first saw it, Mrs. Wallace said it was too big but as they walked around to the front of the house, she quickly changed her mind and said "this is it."

At that time, the Wallaces were among the few people living on the lake which is now lined with many cottages and permanent homes, thankfully hidden from sight by a dense underbrush and trees.

With her husband unexpectedly starting to work part-time for the nearby Cooperage, Mrs. Wallace found herself with plenty of time to work on some of her favourite hobbies -- or crafts that soon turned into businesses.

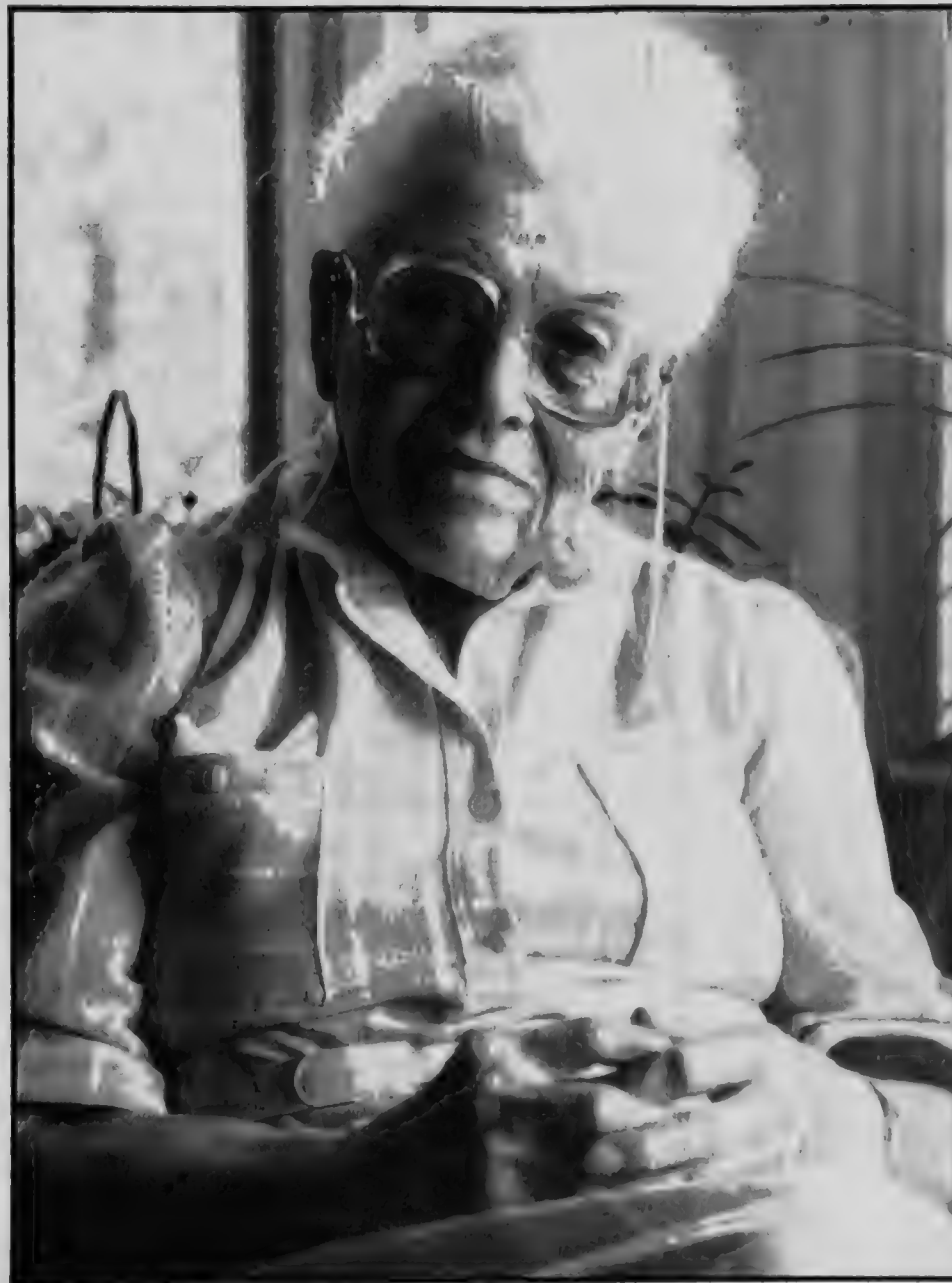

Weaving had started out as something to fill in time, since she had been a teacher in Toronto for several years and had taken a forced early retirement when she became pregnant with her son Carl. She had started teaching in 1914, was fired when she got married, rehired less than a year later, fired again and then asked to return during the Second World War. Having been away from teaching for 15 years, Mrs. Wallace declined the offer and devoted herself to several other activities.

Her father, who was then in his seventies, built her a loom from a plan she had sent away for. It was just a small table top variety, but as her skills grew so did her looms. Her father built all five looms she used. The small one has been donated to the Haliburton Highlands Museum.

Pasted into an old scrapbook are some of the swatches of different materials she has woven and sewn. A beautiful tartan used to sell for $3.50 a yard and Mrs. Wallace found a large market for her cloth since hand-woven clothing had come into vogue. She was also one of the charter members of the Spinners and Weavers Club of Ontario.

"I'd probably still be doing it today if I hadn't been foolish enough to go skiing when I was in my 50s," she says. She hurt her knee and back in an accident on the slopes and found she couldn't sit for long periods of time.

Another one of her passions was painting. Using mainly oils but also some watercolours, she found that "of course I had to paint everything in sight when I moved up here." The beautiful lake and scenery just had to be painted, and so many hours were spent transferring the sights in front of her to canvas.

'Eagle Lake is the friendliest community. They welcome you, they just take you in with them right away,' says Margaret Wallace who moved there in 1950

This hobby soon became a business, with many people requesting a painting or buying those she had already completed. Now that her eyesight has started to fail, she finds it difficult to continue, but the appreciation for the nature around her is still there.

"I think I've had my finger into every craft except pottery," she says, remembering back to a time when people seemed to do far more with their hands.

Local craftspeople were given a boost when high school principal Norm Sisco decided it was about time some arts and crafts night school courses were offered at the school.

The courses included sewing, woodworking, geology, basketry, leather, glove making, painting and even a choral society. Painting proved to be the most popular and after Mr. Sisco left, the painting group continued on. Mrs. Wallace believes that this was one of the founding groups for the Guild of Fine Arts. Instructors would come up for a week and teach interested students painting techniques, much as they do today.

The Wallaces left Eagle Lake for a few years when Mr. Wallace was asked to go the marble mines in Madoc which were having a bit of trouble and needed his help. The house was passed on to her son and daughter-in-law, Carl and Marie, and the Wallaces moved on to another "post-retirement" job.

When her husband died, Mrs. Wallace was asked back to Eagle Lake to live with her family, the only problem being that it was virtually impossible to create a separate living area for her in the white house. It may have looked big, but very little could be done to change the inside.

"At the time, I was only just past 80 and I wasn't ready for the old folks' home," says Mrs. Wallace, who is still self-sufficient at 93. "I wanted a place of my own. I've always been independent."

It was decided the white house would be sold and a new house would be built adjacent to the property. With plenty of wide-open windows overlooking the beautiful vista of Eagle Lake, the house suited everyone's needs for both privacy and companionship. A connecting door joins the two living areas and whether Mrs. Wallace wants some company or a little privacy, it's only a few steps away.

On one side of her "apartment", Mrs. Wallace has a screened-in porch so she can sit outside and listen to the birds whistle to each other. Since losing part of her sight, her other senses have become keener and she can pick up the calls of the various birds who come for a noisy visit. Many things are done by touch now, and a set of binoculars and a magnifying glass are always nearby. "Something has to give when you get to be my age," she says philosophically.

Her arts and crafts activities may have diminished but Mrs. Wallace still likes to get out and participate in the various events in the area. "I belong to everything," she says, and she takes and active interest in what is going on around her.

The mainstay of her life has always been the church, and Mrs. Wallace was among the group that saw to a church being built in Eagle Lake. The Women's Institute, of which she has been a member for 40 years, meets once a month and is responsible for many of the good works in the community.

"The church is an anchor to hold on to the way the world is going," she says, adding that the church has always been part of her ancestors' life. Her family was all "middle class" who lived sensibly and were not heavy drinkers or smokers.

Her family was also a group of long-livers. Until a few years ago she had seven cousins all in their nineties and another member of the family reached 100.

Thankfully, Mrs. Wallace has been blessed with good health and has only been sick a few days in her life. "If you have good health it isn't hard to be into everything," she explains of her active participation in her church and community.

Another reason why she feels she is still so healthy is because while "the times I have gone through have been interesting times, they haven't affected me too much."

"You get sensible, you get cautious."

She can remember being more affected by rationing and other constraints in World War II than in World War I. Her freedoms were fewer but she came out relatively unscathed. The same was true for World War I and the Depression which left many people discouraged.

Many changes have come and gone since she was a young woman, and as to the state of affairs today, "they seem to be making a mess of things but they'll work it all out. Unfortunately I'm not going to find out the answers."

Over the years, Mrs. Wallace has found out a lot about living a fine and prosperous life, gaining the respect and friendship of the many people around her. Just one resident in Eagle Lake, she reflects the warmth and spirit that can be present in a small community which depends on its inhabitants, not size, for its lifeblood.

Public school track meet proves and exciting event

Norland

I must say it certainly held its annual track and field meet. All the students participate in the meet and it's an exciting time for all. Here are the top athletes in each category: Primary Girls - Janet Jewell; Primary Boys - Ray Potter; Junior Girls - Tara Winterburn; Junior Boys - Blayne Brown; Intermediate Girls - Rhonda Riorden; Intermediate Boys - Donald Landry;

Senior Girls - Chrissy Peters; Senior Boys - Kevin Warburton. Congratulations to all those students and to the silver and bronze medal winners also. Yesterday qualifiers from that meet travelled to Kinmount to participate in the Northern Schools Track and Field Meet involving Norland, Cobocok, Kinmount, Burnt River, and Kirkfield. For the first time in my recollection Norland won the meet, barely slipping by Burnt River, who had 118 points to Norland's

122. Norland athletes who distinguished themselves there were Molly Suckling and Kevin Winterburn who picked up the gold medals in the senior category, Chrissy Peters who won the silver medal in the senior

COMMUNITY NEWS

Muriel Bailey's dedication praised

By MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Now that she is retired, Muriel Bailey is looking forward to becoming a more active member in the community where she was born in 1917.

Until last November, Mrs. Bailey was kept busy working at her family's business in Carnarvon, Carnarvon Building Supplies. In the past 11 years, she has become a well-known and well-liked figure at the store, spreading her good cheer and friendly personality to customers and fellow workers alike.

"I was always made welcome and it was a pleasure working with my family," Mrs. Bailey recalls of her years at the store. "They always made me feel like someone special."

Just because she retired from the business doesn't mean the people who worked there forgot how welcome she made everyone feel in return. To show their appreciation, her family threw a surprise retirement party at the home of her son Rick on Sunday. At least 50 friends and family turned out to remind Mrs. Bailey that even though she has retired, she is still fondly thought of by everyone.

On her part, Mrs. Bailey misses those morning drives to Carnarvon from her home in Haliburton, when the sun would shine over the hills "and it was so pretty, especially in the autumn."

She believes that as you get older you should still try to keep busy and she enjoyed working at the store because "it is something to get up for and look forward to."

"I feel people should keep at it and have responsibilities to keep your mind alert," she says. "When you are doing something you feel as if you're worth something."

To keep herself active, Mrs. Bailey is joining several of the local organizations, such as the Guild, and of course is still donating much of her time to St. George's Anglican Church, working on the Chancel Guild.

Working hard to help others has never been a stranger to Mrs. Bailey, who started helping her family in 1936 after her father died. She can remember downtown Haliburton looking like a much different place when she worked at such establishments as the Kozy Korner, Molou Theatre and Bernstein's. During the Second World War, she also worked at the W.O. Bailey mill, the family company that was later sold to Emmerson Lumber.

"In the last ten years, Haliburton has really changed," she says. "I give much credit to the clubs in our community."

In her spare time, Mrs. Bailey likes to relax at the family cottage on Haliburton Lake. The cottage is a favourite family resting spot and her four children commissioned a batique picture of it from Mary Wallace to give to her as a retirement gift. It was presented to her at the party and it appeared to be just one small way of showing Mrs. Bailey how well she was like and appreciated by everyone she worked with.

Friends and family gathered on Sunday to honour Muriel Bailey with warm words and this batik for all her years of hard work at Carnarvon Building Supplies.

West Guilford

The Green Lake Fun Run held on Canada Day will be starting at 11:00 a.m. this year so that runners can be recognized as they approach the finish line around noon. This year, organizers hope to make it a safe race by having a pick-up truck trailing the runners with first aid equipment and a lead car with refreshments available. The committee needs two volunteers with vehicles to accompany the runners. Anyone interested should call 754-2168. The race usually takes less than an hour.

Another new contest planned is an Early Canadian Costume contest. Contestants will be judged in their costume during the opening ceremonies.

Pie bakers should be practising on their favourite recipe. If you wish to enter a pie on Canada Day, please contact the committee, 754-3076.

Congratulations to a couple of young athletes for achievement lately in track and field - Lisa Sisson and Marsha Bain.

Derek Rolfe is on vacation in the Maritimes at Miscou Island, New Brunswick, visiting some friends there.

Proverbs 31:15

This week I would like to share with you three of my favourite cheesebread recipes. I suppose you would call these 'quickbreads' - they use no yeast. All three are different but have one thing in common - they are delicious when served warm with butter (of course!).

Onion Cheese Loaf

Preheat oven to 350. Combine in mixing bowl:

1 cup white all purpose flour
1 cup whole wheat flour
1 tsp. sugar
3 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. dry mustard
1 tsp. salt

Cut in until mixture resembles coarse meal:

¼ cup butter
Add and stir lightly:
½ cup shredded cheddar cheese
2 tbsp. parmesan cheese

Combine separately:

1 cup milk
1 egg

Add all at once to cheese mixture and mix until moistened. Turn into greased loaf pan.

Sprinkle on top:

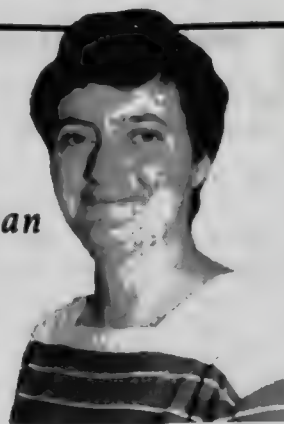

½ cup finely chopped onion
paprika

Bake for one hour.

Savory Cheddar Bread

2 cups all purpose flour

4 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. sugar
½ tsp. onion salt or onion powder
½ tsp. crushed oregano
¼ tsp. dry mustard

by Nada Vaughan

1 ¼ cups shredded cheddar cheese
1 egg, well beaten
1 cup milk
1 tbsp. butter, melted

Stir together in a bowl the flour, baking powder, sugar, onion salt, oregano, dry mustard and cheese. Combine egg, milk and butter; add all at once to dry ingredients, stirring just until moistened. Spread batter in greased loaf pan. Bake in preheated 350 oven for 45 minutes. Cool 10 minutes on wire rack before removing from pan.

Savory Onion and Cheese Bread

1 ¼ cups all purpose flour
3 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. salt
3 tbsp. cold butter
1 cup grated cheddar cheese
½ cup finely chopped onion
1 large egg
½ cup milk

Preheat oven to 400. In a bowl, combine flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in 2 tbsp. of the butter until the mixture is a crumbly texture. Stir in ½ cup of the cheese and make a 'well' in the centre of the mixture. In a frypan, fry the onion in the remaining butter until limp and translucent. Set aside. In a bowl, beat the egg and beat in the milk. Stir in the onion and pour the mixture into the well in dry mixture. Stir to moisten and form a soft dough. Pat dough into a greased 8" round pan and sprinkle remaining cheese over top. Bake for 25 minutes until well risen and golden brown.

Mrs. Thompson as Rev. Burgess still isn't well enough to take over. Tuesday morning service was taken by the assis-

Wednesday morning at fun and fitness Edith Welch tells me she won a perfect score at horse-shoe pitching.

Millie Wood had her two daughters for dinner with her Sunday night. Mrs. and Mrs. Houghton and girls came Wednesday evening and entertained us with music and singing. It was really nice. Mrs. Todd had her grandson and his mother in to visit her, also a short visit with her daughter-in-law.

Construction underway at Glebe Park for festival

Legion News

By GERALD IRISH

Did you see and hear Magnum 44 last Saturday night? This new entertainment at your Legion was very well received, providing light and lively music for everyone's enjoyment. The month of June promises to provide the same high calibre of performances as in the past: June 7 - Porcupine Lumber Co., June 14 - Plain Country, June 21 - Bandana, and June 28 - Bill Winfield.

The new metal flag poles are in place at the front of the Legion. This will enable the raising and lowering of the flags to be done more easily. Prior to this, each time the flags were to be flown at half mast, a group of Legionnaires had to lower and raise a whole section of each pole.

The executive has been approached by the Civilian Group from Markham about providing an update on the Child Identification Program. The Legion provided this service about a year ago. Parents brought their children to the branch to be fingerprinted and photographed. This provides a permanent record of your children's appearances and prints should (God forbid) they ever become lost or are abducted. In early October, we plan to once again provide this service for all in the county.

The Bluegrass brochures are in the final stages of preparation and printing. These very attractive and informative brochures will be given saturation distribution. Look for yours in the mails or at many local businesses. This will certainly help spread the word about this exciting show of shows.

Because of problems regarding the proposed stage and audience site in the former Walling's fields and because of the availability of hydro for the stage, the performances, camping, booths, etc. will all be held within Glebe Park itself. Construction of camping sites is currently underway, with 1200 sites being promised for occupancy before Bluegrass Festival dates. The new site selected for the stage allows us to take advantage of the Park's natural terrain. The stage will be constructed near the water with its back to the lake. The audiences will sit on the banks sloping upward from the performers. This natural amphitheatre setting will ensure excellent viewing for all of the shows.

On Saturday, a number of Legionnaires attended the opening of the newest additions to the Haliburton Museum. These three old buildings have been moved to and reassembled at their new location, near the Museum's main building. The Museum board can be justly proud of these acquisitions and of the permanent record they are creating of our county's past. Congratulations Museum board members.

At the Legion executive meeting on May 29, the chairperson for all Branch 129 committees were selected. They are as follows:

President - Joan Irish - a member of every committee; Immediate Past President - Bruce McKay - advisor to all committees, Bingo; 1st Vice President - Doug Pritchard - Seniors' programs; 2nd Vice President - Gerald Irish - Public Relations and Publicity Bulletin Editor and Bluegrass co-ordinator; Secretary - Mabel Brannigan - Honours & Awards, Leadership & Planning; Treasurer - Wally Chambers - House & Property, Bar Inventory; Sergeant at Arms - Irv Chambers - Poppy; Executive Members - Alvin Cooper - Youth Education and School Bursaries; Reg Crockett - All Sports; Jack McDonagh - Sick and Visiting; Ed Pickard - Ways and Means; Lloyd Whittaker - Service Officer; Wayne Wood - Cadets; James Tice - Entertainment and Bluegrass Assistant Co-ordinator, Manager.

Your president urged each chairperson to select an assistant chairperson to learn about and to become active in Legion affairs. If you are interested in assisting on any of these committees please see the chairperson of that committee and volunteer your time. We are hoping to get as many associates as possible involved. Please volunteer.

A beautiful, large oil painting, of a part of Haliburton Lake, has been donated to your branch by Mr. George Cox. This painting is currently on display in your club room. We will be selling raffle tickets, with this painting as the prize. Only 500 tickets will be printed and will sell for $1 each. This framed work of art created by George would be a welcome addition to any home. Get your tickets soon.

Our annual summer draw has been changed this year. For the past few years we have had a 50-50 draw for $1000 bills and each member was mailed tickets to sell. This year we will be having a draw for a boat, motor and trailer. No tickets will be mailed to you. Your executive asks only that all members get behind this effort and assist with the sale of the tickets. I will soon have more information for you as to boat and motor sizes and makes. The winning ticket will be drawn on the Saturday night of the Bluegrass Festival at 11 p.m.

Buses have been arranged for Branch 129 representatives to attend and participate in the Diamond Jubilee parade and celebrations in Lindsay on June 21 and to the festivities, parade and opening of the new addition to the branch building in Bobcaygeon on July 1. There will be no charge for these excursions. Please sign up in the club room if you plan to attend either or both of these events. Bus space is limited.

Your executive, on your behalf, made the following donations to County programs: $35 to help repair the Rescuer Anne doll used in CPR demonstrations; $50 to the Haliburton County Children's Services to sponsor a child at summer camp; $200 to the Minden Agricultural Society for their Kids' Day on August 13 as the sole sponsors of this day; the use of the auditorium was donated to Dysart Recreation Board representative Marla MacNaull if it is needed for children's shows on July 9 and/or August 30. The use of the auditorium was donated by your branch for the farewell banquet for the James family. Rev. John James and his family are leaving Haliburton County to take up residence at John's new charge in Mount Forest.

The general meeting on June 5 at 8 p.m. will be held in the club room instead of the auditorium. The hall upstairs will be used by the Kinsmen for their convention.

This week's 50-50 draw winner was S. Stewart of Minden, who won $41.25.

Our sympathies are extended to the families of the late Cyril Feir. Cyril, at 84 years of age, was a valued member of Branch 129. He always had a keen interest in branch affairs and we will miss him.

Visit to glass plant an interesting experience

Coboconk news by Sheila Lake

I haven't taken off on some exotic holiday, nor am I dead yet. Though I do have a cold and constant cough, which I have been battling for three weeks.

Dear ones - county your blessings. Mrs. Ethel Farrow will agree it's great to have two legs to walk, or even one, but this lady has no legs, since her surgery of about a month ago. She came home on Thursday and with help from her family, VON and home care she hopes to enjoy whatever time she has left in the future.

I was away from Tuesday afternoon until Thursday evening, house sitting at our son's home at Stroud. On Thursday evening, when Bob and Marilyn came home, they took their children and yours truly, out to supper at Kelonia Restaurant where their daughter, Sharon works on weekends. This restaurant, newly opened on Highway 400 not far from Thornton, is constructed of 14" diameter pine logs, two miles of them, to be exact. As you enter the restaurant, on your girth, a section is used to make glassware. You can watch through the glass wall, as a workman heats, molds, trims and blows the glass. It is most interesting to watch glass coming out as a finished product. A section of the building has the beautiful glassware for sale.

This Kelonia design building is most attractive.

The 'Something for Everyone' (my version) trade market is a busy place these days. Record crowds were out last weekend to browse and buy the many products available. You really must drop in and see for yourself, right across from Tri-County lumber store.

While I was away, I went to see Mrs. Hilda Huzzey, who used to live here, back in the early 60's. She and her husband lived across from the school gate on Albert St. beside the Jack Peel house. In other words, the house that the Harvey Farrow moved out of when they built their new home. Mr. Huzzey died about 1965 and Hilda went back to her native England. She came back to Canada a couple of years ago and lives in a big apartment in Barrie now. She is quite crippled now, but very cheerful and asked about several of her neighbours. I also got to meet Thelma Sheardown from Guthrie, who is a relative of the Goodhand families down this way.

Frank Real Estate has been doing some landscaping in front of their office. It should be very nice when it is finished.

Baseball season is back strong but with almost steady rain for the last while, some games have been rained out.

I'm sorry this isn't very newsy but when I get rid of this sore chest and cough, maybe I'll think better.

Thursday, May 22 a very well-attended Save Our Schools meeting was held at the Norland Community Hall. For those of you not familiar with the Norland Schools issue, here's the scoop: The Victoria County Board of Education has stated that the five Northern Schools (Norland, Cobocok, Kirkfield, Kinnmount, Burnt River) should be closed down and replaced with two new schools located in Burnt River and near the Bexley-Eldon boundary. Needless to say, the idea has met with must opposition. The ministry of Education has granted the board $2.18 million for one school. The people in S.O.S. would rather see the money go towards repairing and improving the existing schools. The board's proposal of two new schools was to be voted on the next night. I'm sorry I don't have the result of the vote (or information as to whether it was indeed taken).

At the meeting the committee decided to ask Laxton, Digby and Longford school trustee Sheila Winfield to put forth a motion that the voting be postponed until all trustees have read the Northern Schools report and have attended public meetings in small communities to hear how the residents feel about the proposal. Nine of the eleven trustees are new, having been elected in November, and the committee feels they may not be completely familiar with all aspects of the issue. I'll try to have some follow up on this next week, but until then keep smiling.

Darla Michele Towns, daughter of Joan and Harry Towns of Eagle Lake, has graduated from Sir Wilfred Laurier University with her Bachelor of Arts degree in Religion and Culture and Sociology. Darla will be furthering her education in this faculty.

Minden CHACE is now open

Minden news

by Maizie Austin

I would like to say how sorry I am about the calls that came in on Sunday. I didn't hang up the phone. Our telephone was out, and when I picked up the receiver the phone went dead. I hope it will work better next week.

Congratulations to Ken Smith, the second winner of $500 in the alu-Mart Baseball Triple Play contest.

Watercolours by Felix Linton of Lindsay will be on exhibit at the Agnes Jamieson Gallery until June 21.

One good thing about troubles is being able to tell others about them.

Don't forget the Home and School Annual Fun Fair that will be held at the Archie Stouffer Elementary School on Saturday, June 14 from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. When you are doing your spring cleaning or run across something you no longer have any use for, such as toys, books, magazines, dishes or knick knacks, they would be very much appreciated.

If you have any news for me to include in my column please try to get it in before 10 a.m. on the Monday morning so your news will appear in the Wednesday paper.

Household Hint: Ivory piano keys are easily cleaned by using a soft cloth dampened in rubbing alcohol.

For the second year in a row, Minden is the destination of the annual motorcyclists' Ride for Sight, a rally of motorcyclists from across Ontario and the United States who make the trip with a pledge from a sponsor. All money raised by the bikers goes to the National Retinitis Pigmentosa Foundation of Canada. There will also be demo rides, a Sunday parade, a barbecue and lots more to see. Spectators are invited to view the display at the Minden fair grounds on Saturday, June 7 and Sunday, June 8.

CHACE Place is now open in Minden on the corner of Main and South Water Street. It will be open Tuesday to Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The Thursday afternoon euchre party will commence on Thursday, June 12 at 1:30 in the Common Room at the Agnes Jamie on Gallery.

Belated happy birthday to Emma Stutt, whose birthday was on Tuesday, June 3.

Happy birthday to Winnifred Barnum on Friday, June 6, also a happy birthday to Meagan Bradley on Sunday, June 8.

The next Women's Institute meeting will be held on Wednesday, June 8 at the home of Jim Grant. The ladies are to meet at the Post Office at 12:15. You are asked to take your eating utensils, a chair and lunch.

Sincere sympathy to the family and friends of Eliza Chalmers, Ken Lewis and Tom Thompson, who died recently.

Happy birthday to Curtis Fielding on Thursday, June 12.

Recipe for this week: Winnie's Rhubarb Muffins - 1 1/4 cup all purpose flour, 1 1/2 cups tsp. baking powder, 1 tsp. salt, 1/4 cup white sugar, 1/4 cup brown sugar, 1 1/4 cups diced rhubarb, 1 large egg, 1/4 cup milk, 1/4 cup oil, 1 tsp. almond flavouring, white or powdered sugar for top. Mix dry ingredients. Beat egg, add milk, oil and almond flavouring. Pour egg mixture over dry ingredients and stir to moisten. Fold in rhubarb. Bake in 375 degree oven for 20 minutes. Dip tops in sugar while still hot, or sprinkle tops with sugar before baking. Peaches or other fruit in season can be used.

That's all for this week. Drive with care and watch for children gettin on and off the school buses. I hope to see you all next week.

We are really sorry that Mrs. Wright is leaving Hyland Crest, but we wish her the best of luck in her new position at the hospital.

On June 3 the Grade 8 students are coming to challenge us to a spelling bee. (I would vote on the older folks, how about you?)

Thursday afternoon the ladies from the Minden Horticultural Society came with the goodies for our tea party. There was also a beautifully decorated birthday cake for the two who had May birthdays, Mrs. Millie Wood and Mr. Fred Bamforth.

Walter Ackerblade called to see his sister, Mrs. Mabel Buttery, and Mrs. Shuyler had her son in to see her. It's nice to see Dr. Good in to greet us all. He looks very well.

Our sympathy goes to the family and friends of Mrs. Chalmers, who died on Thursday night.

On Saturday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Earl Hewitt accompanied by Angus Coulter and Pearl Lyle attended the celebration of Leslie Coulter's 65th birthday. There was quite a crowd. A good time was had by all. Sunday morning Mrs. Myron Bethune from Utterson came in to see her aunt, Pearl Lyle. Ron and Janet Consack and family came in Sunday to visit our new resident, Charlie Brohm, who by the way, we welcome to Hyland Crest. We hope he will like it here.

Board of Education...

Permanent teaching contracts will be offered to the following teachers: Judi Notley, Christine Brown and Walter Tose - effective September 1, 1986.

The Board agreed to supply two teachers for the KinArk Summer Camp Educational program during the month of July, 1986, conditional upon receiving funding from the Ministry of Education for the salaries of the two teachers.

The Board will enter into a Cooperative Education and Transition to Employment Incentive program at the Secondary School, as funded by the Ministry of Education.

The annual review of the Special Education plan for the schools in Haliburton County was accepted. The Plan as amended will be followed for the 1986-1987 school year.

The resignation of Dennis Waymouth as Study Hall Supervisor at the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School was accepted "with regret", effective June 30, 1986.

The resignation of Dwight Thomas as Teachers' Aide at the Victoria Street Elementary School was accepted "with regret", effective May 9, 1986.

and are thoroughly investigated right away.

"If a teacher is innocent it is made clear to everyone concerned," he said.

But Chapman said police work is a bit like it's portrayed in the television sitcoms like 'Barney Miller'.

"There are a lot of funny people and funny incidents that happen. At the end of each shift the guys like to get together and tell stories."

Chapman, who is a dedicated amateur watercolour painter, was presented with a small wall hanging of a loon for being the speaker on such short notice.

A meeting of Minden Women's Institute was held on May 21 at the home of the Mervin Bunkers. Mrs. C. Lacey welcomed all and after the usual opening there were 22 members and two guests present. The card report from Mrs. Moore was read by Mrs. A. Coulter with 34 cards sent since last meeting. Collections for the card fund and Pennies for Friendship were taken. Mrs. B. Harrington accepted the office of second vice president.

Mrs. C. Lacey, district director, gave a full report of the district annual. Minden branch will host this meeting next May and that will also be the group's anniversary. The annual bus trip will be to Cullen Gardens and Black Creek Pioneer Village on July 22, so get your name in to Annie Kernohan.

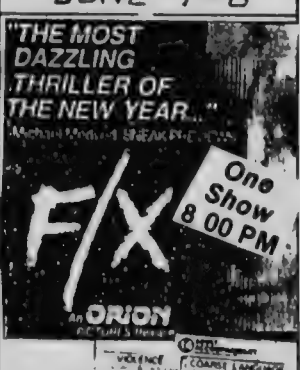

A moment of silence was observed in memory of life member Mrs. Fred Wright.

The next meeting is June 18 at the home of Mrs. Jim Grant. Members are asked to bring eating utensils, a chair and food.

Fifty years of marriage celebrated by the Mintz's

Gooderham news by Mary Hadley

Friends of Nora Carey will be glad to know that she is much improved and able to return to her home after spending a few days in the Haliburton Hospital.

Once again Bradley MacDuff has shown his concern for our wildlife. In his basement he is now caring for a two-week old moose.

Apparently the mother and her two babies were hurriedly crossing the road when the young ones became entangled in the wire fence. One of them broke its leg so could not free itself. Bradley rescued it and applied a splint. It is now housed in the basement, a cast on the broken limb. Standing up, it seems all legs, as it contentedly chews leaves off some branches.

Last year Bradley cared for an orphan deer in his 'Wildlife Sanctuary'. Bradley is caring for not only the baby moose but also for two baby beavers. These came from Winder Wheel Sites. The mother had built her lodge there but because of flooding and possible damage, it had to be destroyed. The two babies were discovered and rescued by Chad Winder with his boat. They are being bottle-fed and cared for along with the moose.

The old Staley farm, recently purchased by Marilyn and David Winder for their future retirement, was the scene of a double birthday celebration for David and George Winder. Guests were Mary and Percy Berry from Tampa Florida, who were friends of the Winder boys since childhood; Sandra and Bob Winder; Shirley and Ron Winder and members of their families; Mabel Winder, mother of the Winder boys and Bob Hunter, father of Marilyn Winder, both of Gooderham.

Sweepstakes tickets were presented to the host and hostess, so let's hope Marilyn and David retire sooner than expected.

Faye Silver was high scorer at the bridge club again last Tuesday evening. Vic Matthews of Wilberforce came second. The club met at the Monmouth Recreation Centre.

A pleasant event took place last Saturday in the Community Centre which was tastefully decorated for the occasion. This was the celebration of the 50th wedding anniversary of Clifford and Priscilla Mintz.

After Blair Mintz

asked the blessing, the head table and large number of guests enjoyed a super and sumptuous buffet dinner.

At the head table with the bride and groom of 50 years ago were their family: Ronnie and Dorothy; Donna and Doug Simmons; Gary and Joan; Blair and Alice. Also present were grandchildren and one great grandchild, as well as many other relatives.

Their son, Blair, acted as M.C. Rev. Roger Sauve, in proposing a toast to the bride, recalled that when he came to minister her almost seven years ago, Clifford and Priscilla were the first ones he met. In his remarks he told of Henry Ford's answer when asked the secret of a successful car. He replied that it was the same as for success in marriage - "stick to the one model."

Reeve Bob McCausland brought congratulations and best wishes as he presented a certificate from the County and a plaque from the Township of Glamorgan.

Army Goff, in making a presentation, remarked that if he needed gardening advice he always went to Clifford, whose garden is a thing of beauty. On behalf of his wife, Jean, and himself, he presented 12 Bibles to be sent by the Gideons to South America in honour of Priscilla and Clifford.

Plaques, certificates and greetings were received from Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, MP Bill Scott, Governor General Jeanne Sauve, MPP John Eakins and the Lieutenant-Governor Lincoln Alexander.

Priscilla, assisted by her daughter, Donna, served wedding cake to the guests.

Opening of gifts, music, and a social time concluded a happy day.

The community extends congratulations and the wish that they may continue to enjoy life's richest blessings.

Out of town relatives were Margaret McCarrell and Nancy from Peterborough; Rosie

Mintz, Mr. and Mrs. Clemon Mintz and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Mintz from Parry Sound; Alfred and Irene Switzer, Whitby; Alex Switzer and his two sons, Clinton and Gordon from Peterborough; Alfred and Elsie McColl of Eagle Lake; Ernie and Edna Mintz from Orillia; Joanne and Ray Field and Joyce Simmons from Cambridge; Janice and George Sutton from Toronto and many others.

Nancy Annette Bagg, daughter of Allan and Eleanor Bagg of Eagle Lake, graduated recently from Durham College in Oshawa with a diploma in Business Administration, majoring in Marketing.

Pamela Jean Iles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Iles of Haliburton, has graduated from McMaster University with a Bachelor of Physical Education.

Officer Cadet Jeffrey Whitfield, son of Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Whitfield of Haliburton, graduated on May 8, 1986 from Officer Cadet Training, Chilliwack, B.C. - Air Force Division. He is a graduate of the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School and graduated from Christ for the Nations with a degree in Practical Theology in May, 1985. He is now posted to St. Jean, Quebec for six months French immersion prior to his pilot training.

Marie Hodgson, wife of Christopher Hodgson and daughter of Audrey and Frank Chambers, recently graduated with a Bachelor of Arts degree in Psychology from Trent University in Peterborough. In 1984 Marie received her Early Childhood Education diploma from Sir Sandford Fleming College. She will be operating the C.H.A.C.E. Summer Nursery School this summer.

Fondly remembered by Karen, Don, Andrew, James and Johnathan. 32-B-4

HOLLAND - In memory of my husband, George E. Holland, who passed away June 5, 1985.

His smiling way and pleasant face
Are a pleasure to recall,
He had a kindly word for each

And died beloved by all.
Some day we hope to meet him,
Some day, we know not when,
To clasp his hand in the better land,
Never to part again.
It broke my heart to lose you.
But you did not go alone
For part of me went with you
The day God called you home.
Lovingly remembered by Elaine and family. 32-P-4

In loving memory of our dear parents, Bert and Linda Mintz, April and May, 1982.

They left us quietly,
Their thoughts unknown,
But left us a memory
We are proud to own.
So treasure them Lord
In your garden of rest,
For when on earth,
They were two of the best.
